UNCLE SAM'S LOSS—The United States liner City of Flint, shown here with survivors of the torpedoed Athenia arriving in Halifax, Canada, today was reported in the Russian port of Murmansk, manned by a German crew and property of a Nazi armed sea raider. In inset is Captain Joseph Geinard of Melrose, commander of the vessel, who, with its crew, is believed interned. Belief she was carrying contraband to England was reported excuse Nazis used to seize City of Flint.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (INS)—While the American State Department launched a broad inquiry into the reported seizure of the U. S. steamship City of Flint by a German warship, the White House today took the position that the City of Flint was on a "perfectly legal voyage" when it was captured.

FREIGHTER SUNK BY DEUTSCHLAND

OSLO, Norway, Oct. 24 (AP)—The German "pocket battleship" Deutschland, speedy 10,000-ton fighting ship, was reported by authoritative sources today to have been the vessel which sank the British freighter Stonegate in the middle Atlantic.

Thirty-eight survivors of the Stonegate were picked up by the United States freighter City of Flint, which later was captured by a German raider, reputedly the cruiser Emden.

This would indicate Germany has managed to slip at least two pocket battleships and one cruiser past the British North sea patrols to raid Atlantic commerce.

The British seamen were landed by the City of Flint's prize crew at Tromsø, northern Norwegian port, and later proceeded to Bergen en route home, after being aided by British officials.

First accounts of the Stonegate's sinking ascribed it to a submarine. Persons who questioned her survivors, however, quoted them as saying it was the Deutschland which sank her with a torpedo.

(The three ships of the Deutschland class each carry eight torpedo tubes. Each also has six 11-inch guns and can make 26 knots. Another of the three, the Admiral Scheer, was said by some survivors to have been the raider that sank the British freighter Clement off the Brazilian coast Sept. 30. The third "pocket battleship" is the Admiral Graf Spee. The German cruiser Emden, reported to have captured the City of Flint, is a comparatively new boat, built in 1925 and classed as a "cadet training ship.")

"No Confirmation" Blockade Pierced

LONDON, Oct. 24 (AP)—An admiralty spokesman said today there was "no present confirmation" of a report that the German "pocket battleship" Deutschland had slipped through the British blockade and sunk the British steamship Stonegate.

Naval circles, however, said that the combined navies of the world would be insufficient to put a complete blockade on the Baltic. These circles asserted that, on a dark or stormy night ships could pass within 100 yards of each other without being detected.

However, the White House, through Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early, said that this position did not necessarily challenge the right of Germany to seize the vessel while it was en route from the United States to Liverpool, England.

He said results of the State Department inquiry would be awaited before a final position is taken.

BULLETINS

LONDON, Oct. 24 (INS)—The Soviet government plans to refer the case of the captured American freighter City of Flint to the United States embassy in Moscow for disposition, it was stated in a telegram received by the Soviet embassy from Moscow today.

Soviet embassy officials said that the case was one for American not German disposition, indicating that the U. S. S. R. is preserving its neutrality and acting strictly in accordance with international law.

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 (AP)—Soviet Russia today told the United States government that full information would be furnished as soon as available concerning the American steamship City of Flint, which was captured by a German sea raider and sent to a Soviet Arctic port.

pathes from Washington, said the American government was expected to demand that Russia release the City of Flint on the ground that Germany, in the absence of extraordinary circumstances, had no right to send the 4963-ton vessel into a neutral port, regardless of any contraband she might have carried.

Early pointedly remarked that

Behind the Front—Capture of the United States steamship City of Flint by a German sea raider and her arrival at a Soviet port under command of a German prize crew has brought the first serious involvement of American shipping in the European war.

United States embassies in Berlin and Moscow pressed inquiries today concerning details of the ship's capture and the fate of her 42 crewmen.

Maritime officials pointed out other neutral ships have been seized, searched and in some instances brought to port not only by Germany but also by Britain. Several American freighters are now in the hands of the British and in several instances contraband cargo has been removed.

Moscow advices said Russia had detained the ship "for the time being" and interned the German prize crew. Eventual disposition of the City of Flint was held by international law experts to be a matter of prime importance as demonstrating neutrality or belligerence of the Soviet.

If the City of Flint is interned by Russia, according to these experts, it means the Soviet union is actually fighting on the side of Germany and that her own vessels are liable to seizure.

On the Sea—As the captor of the City of Flint was the German cruiser Emden, and the American vessel previously had picked up survivors of a British ship sunk by the pocket battleship Deutschland, it was evident Germany has a formidable fleet of commerce raiders working in the shipping lanes. Previously the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer was reported active in the South Atlantic.

Another development in the war at sea was the British claim that another German submarine, engaged in fighting a merchant vessel, had been sunk by British warships.

Soviet Russia and Finland meantime halted negotiations to permit a Finnish delegation to return from Moscow to Helsinki. A Finnish government spokesman said the suspension of talks was "nothing alarming."

The official German news agency, apparently referring to speculation about a speech Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop is to make at Danzig, declared Germany still considered the terms outlined by Adolf Hitler Oct. 6 as the only basis for peace.

At the Front—Action on the western front was exactly zero, as evidenced by almost identical communique from French and German high commands.

Girl's Pluck Saved Trio Lost in Wilds

LOWELL, Oct. 24—It was the grit of 26-year-old Ann Pearsall of Baldwin st., 106 pounds of courage, which won a miraculous victory on treacherous Mt. Washington—saving her own life and those of two men companions on the gale and snow-swept slopes of New Hampshire's highest peak.

That was the conviction today of veteran guides who had said it was impossible for the trio to survive gales and 16-degree temperatures in which they were trapped.

The two men, Edward Coughlin, 22, of Chelmsford st., and Robert Bastow, 24, of Talbot st., North Billerica, were quick to give credit to the calm, blue-eyed blonde, who stands but five feet two inches.

The plucky girl, who is one of 12 children—refused to become panic-stricken. She sang to keep up the spirits of her friends, and she knew all the time they would come out all right.

Miss Pearsall and the two men made their own way to within a mile of Pinkham Notch highway, before they came across rescue parties.

Soaked to the waist in wading through Dry River, the out-of-doors girl urged her companions on and when the going became the toughest huddled together for warmth, pushing forward at daybreak.

At no time did she weaken and now that the ordeal is over, her first promise was to scale Mt. Washington again this winter.

WADED IN RIVER

"I have climbed the summit three or four times and I'll probably try it again, but not right away," said Miss Pearsall, telling of her experiences.

"With the two men I waded back and forth through a mountain stream looking for the trail, sometimes in snow, sometimes in rain. The water in the river came up to my waist. I can't imagine why they call it the Dry river. We were all soaking wet."

"I tramped until about 5 o'clock the next morning, then rested three hours and got up at 5 o'clock and all there was to eat were a couple of bologna sandwiches. Right now I'm hungry."

"I went up by the trail. And I wanted to go down the Dry river trail, instead of the road. I wanted to go down the hard way."

"The hardest part of coming down the mountain was wading back and forth in the stream and in the rain and snow. I was never frightened. I knew that if we followed the river we would find our way out."

"In fact, I don't consider that we were even lost."

"Some of the way coming down"

Man Dies in Fire Month After Wife's Tragic Death

A 60-year-old South End man was burned to death today, a scant month after his wife lost her life in a tragic manner.

Today's victim was Francis J. Fox of Shawmut ave. Found unconscious with his bed afire, he died on the way to City Hospital.

The blaze spread to walls of Fox's room and threatened safety of other occupants of the building, driving 12 to the street.

Mrs. Fox, 58, was scalded to death a month ago when a kettle of boiling soup toppled on her.

On story of neighbors that Fox, a WPA worker, had been despondent since his wife's fatal accident, fire officials and police began an investigation of today's blaze.

Flames were confined to Fox's room and damage amounted only to $50.

Nomadic Girl, Companion Held

The romance trail ended today for a 23-year-old Vermont girl and her 20-year-old companion when they were haled into Quincy District Court on charges of idle and disorderly conduct.

The couple, according to police, had been living in an abandoned camp in the West Quincy woods for more than a week, having stopped there on "the way South."

They told police, it was said, that they had met in Newport, N. H., and had decided to travel South looking for work.

Taken before Judge Kenneth Nash, the two, Gladys L. Cottrill of Brattleboro, Vt., and Paul G. Drouin of Concord, N. H., were held in $200 bail, as the case was continued until Nov. 3.

GUNMEN HOLD UP SO. BOSTON BANK, FLEE WITH $600

Two armed bandits today held up the Andrew Sq. Co-operative Bank in South Boston, bound and gagged the manager, his wife, and their 21-year-old daughter, and escaped with $600.

One of the bandits was masked with a handkerchief, the victims told police.

Chester F. Diugokecki and his wife, Mary, who acted as treasurer of the bank, were in the establishment at 632 Dorchester ave., and their daughter Josephine was just entering when the bandits walked in.

"This is a holdup. Don't yell," one of the men warned, flourishing an automatic pistol.

The two then herded the three victims into a back room, where they were bound and their mouths taped to prevent their giving the alarm.

By the time the three could free themselves the robbers had fled, ignoring checks in the bank's coffers, but scraping up all available cash.

A few minutes after the holdup police cars raced to a point near the Columbia rapid transit station on a report that plates were being changed on a car.

The call was believed to have been a ruse to enable the robbers to escape in another direction.

Father of Eight Kills Wife, Self

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Oct. 24 (AP)—The mother and father of eight children were found dead today, victims of a shooting which, State Policeman J. L. Hochreiter said, resulted from an argument over a bottle of beer.

Hochreiter said the evidence indicated that Stanley Cerkluski, 53, shot his wife, Helen, 43, and then turned the pistol on himself after he had missed the bottle from his coat pocket.

Fire Routs 33 Lowell Nurses

LOWELL, Oct. 24—Thirty-three St. John's Hospital nurses were driven in their night clothing from their temporary home in the old Immaculate Conception high school building today by fire which later swept through the building.

None of the nurses were injured, but all were shivering with the temperature at freezing point, as they huddled on the porch of the building awaiting taxicabs to take them to the hospital, several blocks away.

The blaze was discovered by the janitor of the three-story brick building at Park and Andover sts. It started above the boiler in the basement, he reported. The loss was estimated at between $500 and $10,000.

NAZI SEIZURE OF U. S. SHIP DELAYS ARMS BILL VOTE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP)—Discussion over German seizure of the American freighter City of Flint threatened today to prolong the Senate neutrality debate, although Democratic leaders once more tried to curb the speechmaking.

Some advocates of the Administration neutrality program were quick to argue that the incident proved the wisdom of a "cash and carry" system to prevent American ships from taking cargoes to belligerents.

Senator Byrnes (D.), S. C., a supporter of the Administration bill, told reporters:

"Under the pending embargo repeal bill there would be no such incident as the City of Flint seizure, since American shipping would not be permitted to enter the danger zone."

Senator Connally (D.), Texas, another backer of the bill expressed his belief that not only seizure but sinking of American ships may be expected unless they are barred from the war zone.

"Of course, Hitler will sink American ships," he asserted, "whether they have munitions and arms aboard or ordinary articles of commerce. The Kaiser did it between 1914 and 1917."

Democratic Leader Barkley made it plain that unless an agreement to limit debate was forthcoming, he would force the Senate to hold night sessions.

He took that position after a conference with Vice President Garner, who was said to be annoyed at the long debate.

The opposition group scheduled a meeting at 11 a. m. E. S. T., to discuss Barkley's proposal for a limitation on speeches. Senator Johnson (R.) of Cal., blocked the plan late yesterday, advising Barkley that foes of the embargo repeal bill wanted a chance a talk over the situation.

Barkley had suggested that future speeches be limited to 45 minutes on the bill and 45 minutes on each amendment.

While Administration lieutenants were spending most of yesterday maneuvering for a limit on debate, Senator Nye (R.) of N. D., criticized the Administration bill and Majority Whip Minton (D.) of Ind., upheld it.

Quiz 5 Youths In Car Thefts

While four alleged auto thieves faced Chelsea court today five Charlestown youths were being questioned in connection with what police described as a stolen auto goods racket involving loot worth hundreds of dollars.

Auto theft charges were brought against the four men in Chelsea after they were halted at gunpoint near the Chelsea-Everett line, at the end of a four-mile chase.

According to police, the four were stripping a new sedan, stolen in Boston from Jackson Dick, Jr., Harvard junior.

They were booked as Pasquale Devico, 35, Pine st., North End; Sebastian de Julio, 24, Prince st., North End; John Zarella, 22, Sylvia st., East Lexington, and Frank Fabiano, 26, Stillman st., North End. Three have police or prison records.

5 Are Quizzed In Store Looting

Five members of an alleged robbery ring, said by police to have looted a Cambridge hardware and automobile accessories firm of thousands of dollars worth of merchandise, were questioned today at police headquarters.

Police said the systematic thievery had been going on since early September.

They declared the ring involved an employee of the firm, the Butts Orway Co., of Sixth st., Cambridge, a Charlestown filling station operator, a Somerville truck driver who makes his home in Jamaica Plain, and a Roxbury automobile parts salesman, among others. The Butts Orway employee was to be charged with larceny, while the others would be accused of receiving stolen goods, police asserted.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (AP)—The Dionne quintuplets probably will reach a height of five feet five inches and will weigh 115 pounds each when fully grown, in the opinion of Dr. Allan Roy D'Almeida, who brought the famous little girls into the world.

The 56-year-old country doctor, stopping in New York to address the Herald Tribune Forum tomorrow, disclosed that the quintuplets do not know that the British Empire is at war and probably will not be told for some time.

School Row Stirs 100 Newton Parents

Demanding that vocational classes and manual training machinery be removed from the Hamilton School, in Grove st., Newton Lower Falls, more than 100 well-to-do residents of the neighborhood threatened today to withdraw their children in protest against present conditions.

Howard W. Lewis, president of the Newton Lower Falls Improvement Ass'n, told the Newton school committee he and at least ten other residents of Newton Lower Falls would move out of the city to adjacent communities if the Hamilton school situation was not immediately corrected.

Noise of machinery used in trade and vocational classes at the school interferes with the study of pupils taking regular elementary courses, Lewis said.

He asserted further that he and scores of other parents living in the residential section served by the Hamilton school object to having their younger children associate with the much older pupils from all sections of Newton who are learning mechanical arts and occupations.

Lewis presented to the school committee a petition signed by more than 100 Newton Lower Falls parents asking that immediate steps be taken to find other quarters for the trade and vocational classes.

Franklin E. Smith, chairman of the school committee, promised he and his associates would give the plea of the Newton Lower Falls parents "sympathetic consideration."

Mrs. Rose Perlman of 39 Wood Haven st., Mattapan, whose twin sons, Lester and Wilfred, 24, are in the U. S. Army in the Philippines, joined the National Legion of Mothers of America yesterday, and, with her mother, Mrs. Tillie Sarofman, organized a sentry post.

They were among an enrollment of 1500 mothers announced yesterday since the nation-wide drive to keep the United States out of war started here on Saturday.

Mrs. Perlman said she had been anxiously scanning the war news, fearful that the United States might become involved and her sons sent with other American youth to fight in a foreign land.

"I was encouraged and thrilled when I read in the Sunday Advertiser and in the Daily Record and American that branches of a national organization of mothers were being formed here," said Mrs. Perlman.

"I had often prayed for such an organization. I worried like thousands of other mothers who, like I, do not want their sons sacrificed in a war that in no way concerns the United States. But I felt powerless to do anything or to say anything that would be heard."

"That is why the Legion of Mothers made an instant appeal to me and my mother, and we are organizing a Sentry Post. My mother has two sons, 38 and 40. It is a grand movement in the right direction and deserves the support of every mother and American woman."

WON BY SLOGANS

The recruits were won by the slogans of the Mothers' Legion:

1—To oppose the sending of American soldiers to fight on foreign soil.

2—To support a strong program for adequate national defense.

3—To oppose all radical and pernicious groups whose object is the destruction of the American form of government.

Impressed by the national enrollment of mothers, Mrs. Mary G. Sullivan of Morris st., Malden, telephoned that 200 mothers in that city had pledged themselves to join the Legion of Mothers.

Five minutes later, Mrs. Matilda

Lester Perlman Wilfred Perlman

Firozzi, Hannan st., Roslindale, telephoned that 100 mothers had signed up in her neighborhood.

Mrs. Hannah M. Connors of Milton, first "Sentry Mother" in New England, who has been taking a leading part in the recruiting, announced that her enlistments totaled 500 at noon yesterday.

MAGIC APPEAL

Thus the glad tidings hourly poured in, evidence of the magic appeal of a movement the motivating power of which is Americanism and its MAJOR AIM, TO KEEP AMERICA OUT OF WAR.

Inquiries, as organization progresses show, that it should be borne in mind that women can form their own Sentry Posts of seven members and appoint one of the number Sentry Mother; that daughters can be enrolled as well as mothers, and that the Legion is open to all women who are American citizens.

"GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY"

Mrs. Loretta Murray Petze of Walnut st., Weymouth, who joined the Legion of Mothers yesterday with a group of neighbors, said she has six brothers of military age, one of whom served in the World War.

"American mothers, through such a national organization," said Mrs. Petze, "are afforded a golden opportunity to show the entire world the road to peace."

"Judging from developments, it appears that the mothers of America are now the only hope for keeping this country out of the war in Europe."

"The women must unite in order to keep their men out of a war that is none of our business."

MRS. JACOB PERLMAN
Looks at Pictures of Twin Sons

Men loathe war as much as women, but men lack the initiative to organize an anti-war movement, because of fear that they might be branded as cowards.

"The opposition of American mothers to sending their sons to fight overseas should not be mistaken for pacifism. American men will fight to the last drop of their blood and their women will fight with them if necessary in defense of our country. National defense is the only justification for war. A national organization of mothers has been sorely needed for years."

Names and addresses of members registered in various communities should be mailed to Legion of Mothers, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. Telephone Liberty 4000.

Mrs. Pelze announced the following enrollments yesterday: Mrs. Lawrence Young, 11 Lakeside ave., East Weymouth; Mrs. John Brady and Mrs. William Murray, both of 56 Granite st., and Mrs. Joseph Guidice 80 Harding ave., Mrs. Robert Grey, Bryant ave., Miss Nellie Driody, 23 Walker st., and Mrs. Catherine Murray, 22 Walker st., all of Weymouth.

Mrs. Petze was elected "Sentry Mother" of the first Sentry Post and started immediately to organize 49 women for a Patrol.

Heroic Mother, 2 Children, Die in Flames

GRAND JUNCTION, Col., Oct. 24 (AP)—Mrs. Homer Harmon gave her life in a vain attempt to save her two small children from fiery deaths.

Harmon, a rancher, found the body of his son Homer, three, on a doorstep, and his wife and five-year-old daughter Kay, dead in the kitchen.

Coroner A. O. Krohn theorized: The children's clothing caught fire as they played near a small blaze in their back yard. They ran to the house. Mrs. Harmon's clothes ignited as she tried to beat out the flames in Kay's. Homer, Jr., fell dead as he reached the stairs.

Divorce Suit Brings 2 Murders, Suicide

RENO, Nev., Oct. 24 (INS).—Failure of a husband to dissuade his wealthy New York wife from filing a divorce suit was blamed today for a double murder and suicide.

The distraught husband, N. A. Webster, 60-year-old retired sea captain, took his wife, Mrs. Lillian Hawthorne Webster, 55, and her nurse-companion, Mrs. Louise Schmeltz, 50, on a ride to Pyramid Lake in the mountains northeast of Reno. There he shot the two women and turned the gun on himself.

Webster married the wealthy woman after she hired him as her gardener on her Long Island estate.

Coroner's deputies said several notes found in Webster's pockets indicated the shooting was premeditated.

The trio was accompanied on the ride by A. A. Forrester of Reno, a newly-made friend of Webster.

Forrester said that when they arrived at the lake last night, Webster asked that he leave them alone for a few minutes.

"I started to walk away," Forrester said, "and was lighting a cigarette when I heard three shots. I ran back to the car and found all three of them huddled in their seats. Webster was clutching a gun in his hand."

Forrester drove back to Reno at 70 miles an hour to inform police.

The two women were dead when removed from the car. Webster died as he was being placed on a hospital operating table.

Forrester said that Webster and his wife had not quarreled during the ride.

The notes in Webster's pockets also directed that he and his wife be buried together and that all records in the divorce case, in the possession of Attorney Samuel Mann of New York city, be impounded.

He asked that his personal jewelry be given to the eldest son of his lawyer, Walter Avery, of Schemerhorn st. and Court, Brooklyn.

In another note, Webster directed that his wearing apparel and other personal property at his hotel room in Reno be given to E. Gordon Burrow, a clerk at the hotel.

She Bars Children, Marriage Annulled

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 24 (AP).—A 22-year-old marriage was annulled today by Advisory Master John A. Matthews after the husband charged that his wife failed to keep her promise to him to raise a family.

"I annul this marriage on the ground of fraud," Matthew ruled in the case of Leo and Rose Eibert of Newark. "The evidence here is that this woman before her marriage made up her mind she would not have children. Her conduct strikes at the very essence of marriage."

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, poisons under the skin, and other ailments.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, and successfully rid millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 45 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

was treacherous. But we never had any doubt we would find our way out. Several times during the night I thought I could see a light ahead, but when we arrived there, there was none. I guess it was just an optical illusion.

"But I certainly was glad when we knew we were on the right trail."

Miss Pearsall said that for a time she and the two men were roped together, but they moved about so much in the river and the rope became so wet, first from snow, then from rain, that they decided they would be better off without it.

"The boys were just fine," she said. "None of us were excited. All the excitement was in Lowell. We have climbed the mountains before and have skied on them in spring and winter."

"I was so little affected by my experience on Mt. Washington that I plan to climb Kearsarge Mountain in North Conway within the next two weeks."

LOST WAY IN RAINE

The point at which they were found is on the opposite side of the mountain from which they would normally have descended, and the three hikers explained they had lost the way while climbing down the treacherous Tuckerman's Ravine trail—a short cut from the summit.

Forest rangers said the three owed their lives to the fact they had managed to descend the trail to below timberline, before darkness. Had they been caught in the sub-arctic area above timberline when the storm set in, veteran rangers declared they would have been doomed.

Below timberline, rocks and trees offered sufficient shelter to offset the full fury of the storm.

The girl and two men who almost miraculously cheated death were members of a party of eight, including three other young women, who hiked to the mountain summit, more than a mile above sea level, on Sunday.

The five other members of the party declined to attempt the trail and the party divided, the five more cautious climbers returning by way of the comparatively safe Mt. Washington carriage road.

Suit Marks Start Of New Wage Era

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP).—The wage-hour law celebrated its first birthday anniversary today with a new administrator and an injunction suit.

Lt.-Col. Philip Fleming, the trouble-shooting army engineer, who professed no intentions to be a "crack owner," took over direction of the wage-hour division while his legal staff hastened to prepare for the first big court test of its powers.

The anniversary was marked also by a change in wage and hour standards for thousands of workers whose pay envelopes or work week are affected by the act.

Some 690,000 were in line for pay raises as the minimum wage requirement changed from 25 to 30 cents an hour, where it will remain for six years unless revised by Congress.

The maximum work week was narrowed at the same time from 44 to 42 hours for some 2,380,000 workers who are now entitled to time and a half compensation for hours beyond that limit.

A court action which may test eventually the validity of the act was under way in New Orleans, where three southern cotton textile manufacturers obtained from the circuit court of appeals a stay against the 32½ cents an hour minimum wage put into effect by a special wage order. The rate applies only to 175,000 workers in the textile industry.

U. S. OPENS SPEEDY PROBE OF FLINT SEIZURE

Report Nazi Cruiser Emden Took Liner

The incident would not have happened if the Administration's neutrality bill, now pending before Congress, was law.

Early, at his press conference, said:

"The situation surrounding the City of Flint's seizure divides it self into three parts. They are: 'The City of Flint was on a perfectly legal and lawful voyage under existing American law.'

'Under the requested neutrality act now pending before Congress, the City of Flint could not have sailed.'

'The State Department has sent out orders to its various representatives and is awaiting reports.'

INQUIRIES LAUNCHED

Early's statement indicated that the State Department not only had instructed its embassy at Berlin to launch informal queries regarding the fate of the City of Flint, but that it also had sent similar instructions to representatives in other European capitals, such as Moscow and London.

American Ambassador to Russia, Laurence Steinhardt, and consular attaches at Oslo were instructed by the State Department to furnish full information concerning the fate of the 4963-ton United States Lines vessel and its captain, Joseph L. Gainard of Melrose, Mass., its officers and crew.

The department acted after the U. S. Maritime Commission received a report from Tromsø, Norway, that the City of Flint had been seized by a German warship—reportedly the new cruiser Emden—after the City of Flint had picked up 38 British survivors of the torpedoed British freighter Stonegate. (The Stonegate had been sunk by a German "pocket" battleship, the Deutschland, according to Oslo, Norway, reports.)

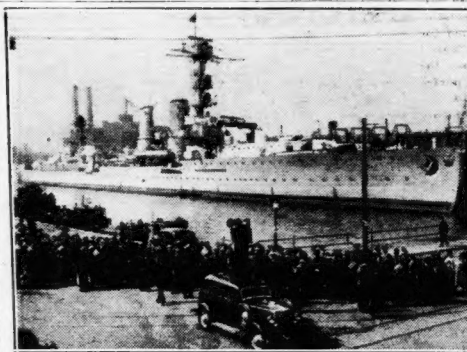

BOARDED BY PRIZE CREW

The Norway report added that the City of Flint was boarded by a German prize crew which took it to Tromsø. Flying the Nazi flag, the City of Flint entered the Norwegian port Saturday, according to the commission's information. The British seaman on the Stonegate were put ashore there, fresh water was taken aboard and on the same day the City of Flint sailed south from Tromsø presumably for the North Russian ports of Murmansk and Kola.

Press dispatches from Moscow stated officially the vessel is now at Kola, where it is being detained by Soviet authorities. The American crew still is presumed to be aboard.

ASSUME CREW SAFE

More than 50 different types of goods were carried by the vessel, including such items as lard, cereals, canned meats, flour, canned goods, apples, wax, lubricating oil, cotton, sewing machines, plows, tractors, asphalt, pitch, grease, shade rollers, machinery, silk, commercial chemicals, abrasive grains, disinfectants, feathers, rags, cof-

Captured by Emden Norway Reports

TROMSØ, Norway, Oct. 24 (AP)—Norwegian officials announced today that the German cruiser Emden had captured the American steamer City of Flint as a contraband carrier after the steamer had rescued 38 British seamen.

The City of Flint, in the hands of a German prize crew of 17, put into Norwegian waters off Tromsø last Friday night to land 38 seamen from a torpedoed British freighter, the 3044-ton Stonegate, and to take on fresh water.

Authoritative sources said the swift German "pocket-battleship" Deutschland was the warship which sank the Stonegate in mid-Atlantic, far outside the British naval blockade designed to bottle the German navy in the Baltic.

(The United States embassy in Berlin and Moscow pressed inquiries concerning the City of Flint's capture and the fate of her crew.)

GERMAN CREW INTERNEED

The 42 crewmen of the City of Flint were still aboard the vessel when she disappeared Saturday evening, bound for Kola, Russian Arctic port near Murmansk, where she arrived Sunday night. The German prize crew was interned there by Russian authorities.

Authorities here expressed belief that the American crew would be sent home from the Russian port.

They said that before she was stopped by the Emden the City of Flint had picked up from lifeboats 38 survivors from the Stonegate.

She said their ship had been torpedoed and sunk a week before the American ship's arrival here.

She was flying the German flag when she reached Tromsø.

(The Stonegate is operated by the Turnbull, Scott Shipping Co., Ltd., of London.)

The picking up of the Stonegate's survivors was the City of Flint's second act of mercy since the European war started. She carried 220 survivors of the sunken British liner Athenia to Halifax. The Athenia was sunk Sept. 3.

SEIZED BY EMDEN

Twenty-four hours after the Stonegate's seamen were taken aboard by the American vessel the cruiser Emden—bearing the same name as one of the most famous German raiders in the World War—seized her, said Norwegian authorities.

When the vessel reached Tromsø the commander of the prize crew asked Norwegian permission to land the 38 Stonegate survivors. He classified them as prisoners of war.

The prize crew also was permitted to take on water in accordance with international law covering seized ships taken to neutral ports.

Wife Sure Skipper of Flint Safe

Convinced that the United States government will insure the safety of her sea-hero husband, Mrs. Ethel M. Gainard of Marvin rd., Melrose, today dismissed as the "fortunes of war" the seizure by Nazis of his ship, the freighter City of Flint.

The City of Flint and her skipper, Joseph L. Gainard, who rescued 227 survivors of the Athenia disaster, were reported as seized by a German raider in the North Atlantic and interned in a Russian port.

"I was distressed at first when I heard the Germans had seized the boat," she confessed. "And when she failed to reach her destination in the expected time I thought the vessel might have been delayed by a storm, until the messages last night made it plain what had happened to her."

"My husband did not expect any trouble when he left for England with his cargo. He said the vessel had an American flag painted on the side and was lighted at night. But he didn't discuss it very much when he was home last. That was right after he brought home the survivors of the Athenia."

"He talked more about the Athenia rescue than his coming voyage. He knew, of course, that the hazard was there in taking any cargo overseas that might be considered contraband. But it didn't seem to worry him."

Swiss Seize Toy Balloons Bearing Hitler's Speech

BASEL, Oct. 24 (AP)—There had been a carnival last night at the nearby village of Riehen, so nobody paid much attention when a few brilliantly colored toy balloons drifted down on the village streets.

But when children who caught them found excerpts from a speech by Adolf Hitler printed in French on the balloons the Riehen police went into action.

They caught 20 balloons and confiscated them, much to the children's disgust. Police said the balloons apparently had been released by the Germans in Baden, destined for French soldiers across the Rhine. A strong north wind bore some into Switzerland.

Hague Law on Flint May Be Reds' View

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP)—In requesting Russia, as a neutral, to release the ship and crew, unless such conditions as storm, lack of provisions or a break down of machinery forced her into port, the American government will rest its case on a traditional American attitude.

Russia, on the other hand, may rely upon Article 23 of the 1907 Hague Convention on neutrality to enable her to contest the probable United States claim.

This article stated that "a neutral power may allow prizes to enter its ports and roadsteads, whether under convoy or not, when they are brought there to be sequestered pending the decision of a prize court. It may have the prize taken to another of its ports."

"If the prize is conveyed by a warship the prize crew may go on board the conveying ship."

"If the prize is not under convoy the prize crew are left at liberty."

When the United States ratified the Hague Convention it specifically declined to accept Article 23.

Russia, therefore, may claim that the City of Flint can be detained in port until a German prize court decides her fate, but the United States will say that such detention is illegal.

See Tangle In Seizure Of Flint

LONDON, Oct. 24 (AP)—As Great Britain claimed further success in her war against German submarines, the press gave major display to seizure of the American steamer City of Flint by Germany.

"Nazi seize U. S. ship that aided Athens," was the essence of the headlines.

Private shipping sources said they were informed the City of Flint never reached a port in the United Kingdom after sailing from New York Oct. 3 and therefore must have been seized somewhere off the British coast.

(The New York Maritime Register listed the City of Flint as having arrived at Manchester, Oct. 15, and sailed for Liverpool and Glasgow.)

Since the ship was under charter from the U. S. Maritime Commission to the United States Lines, shipping circles said the incident raised many points of international law on which Washington would have to gather data before the situation became clear.

The British Government announced that warships had sunk another submarine while it was engaged in a fight with a merchant vessel. This was added to the submarines listed yesterday as attacked at sea by British planes. The air ministry said the plane attacks were "believed to have been successful."

Jutland Hears Heavy Gunfire

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 24 (AP)—The newspaper Ekstrabladet today reported that inhabitants of Hantsholm in northern Jutland late yesterday saw four large warplanes flying north and half an hour later heard heavy gunfire.

Hantsholm is on Denmark's extreme northwestern coast, facing the Skagerrak and the North sea.

Report Nazi Crew Deserted Ship

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 24 (AP)—Several crew members of the German liner Columbus, which has been anchored in Mexican waters southeast of Vera Cruz since the outbreak of the European war, were reported today to have deserted because of conditions on board.

Foreign intelligence agents, who have been watching the ship, said food supplies were running low. The crew has been denied shore leave.

BRITISH SEARCH U. S. SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP)—Maritime commission officials here today said that "several" American merchant ships now are being detained for search by the British.

"This has been going on ever since the start of the war and it is perfectly legal," a spokesman said.

Recently, it was said, the British held up for search more than 100 neutral vessels. These vessels were released after being searched but in some instances the British removed cargo falling within their contraband lists. Cargoes have been removed from at least two American vessels and the ships allowed to continue on their way.

Commission officials said unofficial reports indicated that most of the American vessels now being detained by the British are the Black Falcon and the Black Comet, operated by Black Diamond Lines.

The American government has not recognized the contraband lists of any of the nations now at war, and has taken the position that American flag ships may carry anything except arms, ammunition and implements of war, forbidden by the present neutrality act.

British and German contraband lists are so extensive that they include almost anything which might help the other in war.

U. S. Launches Probe Of Reds and Bund

By WILLIAM S. NEAL

International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (INS)—The Department of Justice today informed Chairman Dies of the House un-American activities committee that it is launching an immediate investigation to determine whether the Communist party and German-American bund can be prosecuted for failure to register as propaganda agents for foreign governments.

At the same time Dies said that his committee has evidence "which warrant indictment of practically every leader in the Communist and Fascist movement in the United States."

ACTS QUICKLY

The decision of Atty.-Gen. Murphy to investigate the two organizations followed quickly upon Dies' request yesterday for action. Dies asserted that both organizations are required by law to register with the State Department as foreign propaganda agents.

At an early morning conference, Dies said, Justice Department officials informed him that a staff of lawyers will begin work immediately to sift the voluminous testimony taken by the committee.

The investigation, Dies indicated, also will include "front organizations" of the Communist party and the Bund.

"The Department of Justice is anxious to co-operate in every possible way," said Dies.

WILL SUPPLY EVIDENCE

"The committee will supply all its evidence which, we feel, shows conclusively that the law has been violated by failure of these organizations to register. We have other evidence which warrants the indictment of practically every leader in the Communist and Fascist movements in the United States. There is not a leader who has not violated some penal law."

"With the co-operation of the administrative branch I think a great deal can be accomplished in ridding the country of these subversive movements and putting a stop to racketeering under the name of patriotism or liberalism."

Although Dies did not specifically name any "front" organizations, the committee itself has been moving steadily in a drive to isolate the party from these groups.

Finns Get New Red Demands

HELSINKI, Oct. 24 (AP) The Finnish delegation negotiating with Soviet Russia will leave Moscow tonight to return to Helsinki, bringing new written proposals from the Kremlin, a Finnish government spokesman said today.

The spokesman said return of the delegation headed by Dr. Juhon Kusti Paasikivi, which arrived in Moscow only yesterday, was "nothing alarming."

"They thought it best to come back to consult the government," said the spokesman, adding that the negotiations would be continued, but it was uncertain whether by Paasikivi, or through normal diplomatic channels.

The statement that negotiations would be continued was greeted here with relief, but there was no relaxation in military preparations of this little country fearful of infringement of her independence. Finland once was a grand duchy of Imperial Russia.

Finland 'Confident Russia Won't Fight'

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 (AP)—Finland, bargaining at length with Soviet Russia, was believed by foreign observers today to be balking at surrender of the Åland islands in the Gulf of Bothnia and quartering of Soviet troops in Finland proper.

These sources expressed belief Russia was requesting certain small islands in the gulf of Finland and possibly some trade privileges, and that Finland would give way this far.

Browder Bailed By Socialite

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (AP)—The socially prominent Mrs. Hester G. Huntington, who came to the aid of Earl Browder "as a matter of principle," posted $7500 security today, freeing the Communist leader from the federal house of detention.

Browder, Kansas-born general secretary of the Communist party in the United States, was indicted yesterday on charges of fraudulent obtaining and using a passport for travel abroad.

He would have been freed last night, but it was too late by the time Mrs. Huntington, who earlier had produced a $5000 government bond as security, turned up at the Federal building with an additional $2500 in cash.

No Browder spent the night in a cell.

Mrs. Huntington, who is in the Social Register and who described herself as a philanthropic worker, was present at the federal building when Browder was liberated.

For her pains yesterday she was served with a subpoena to appear before the federal grand jury investigating a fake passport ring. She made it clear, however, that she did not know Browder personally.

M. N. G. Anti-Air Guns on Display

The Massachusetts National Guard will demonstrate its anti-aircraft guns on Boston Common today in the hope of recruiting city youth into its ranks. The Guard seeks 2400 additional men by Nov. 1.

Adjt. Gen. Edgar C. Erickson announced that an additional week's training had been ordered by the War Department, and that organization commanders were to report to him at the State House, Oct. 30, with suggestions as to use of the extra training period.

Several plans are considered, one providing for a general training period for the whole Guard, another providing for sectional training periods, and a third would split the period into two or three week ends, so as not to interfere with civil employment of members.

SUB SINKS FREIGHTER FROM HUB

LONDON, Oct. 24 (INS)—Another neutral steamer paid the price of war in the North sea today when the 5962-ton Greek freighter Konstantinos Hedjipateras was sunk, allegedly by a German U-boat.

Fifteen members of the crew landed in a lifeboat on the English coast, the captain stating that a submarine had fired a torpedo. Eight other seamen were picked up by a rescue ship but three members of the crew and the English pilot are missing. They were last seen swimming some distance out at sea.

Sailed From Boston

Loaded With Scrapiron

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (AP)—The States Marine Corp., operator of the Greek freighter Konstantinos Hedjipateras, victim of a German

U-boat, said today the vessel left Boston Oct. 6 with 7200 tons of scrap iron.

She was bound for "a port in England," the company said. Built in Sunderland, England, in 1913, the vessel was 388 feet long. She had carried the following names before being captured by the Greek firm: Den of Ewne Pinemore, Lesreaulx and Chaland plain.

Warns Hitler's Final Peace Terms Given

BERLIN, Oct. 24 (AP) The official news agency, DNB, said euphatically today that proposals contained in Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech of Oct. 6 still constitute the only basis on which Germany will consider peace.

"As far as German peace conditions are concerned," DNB declared, "they are to be drawn exclusively from the Fuehrer's Reichstag speech in which he showed the world the way to peace."

Hitler, speaking at the end of the Polish campaign, said Germany had no war aims in the west, but added that the Polish state never would be revived in its old form, and that only Soviet Russia and Germany have a legitimate right to reorganize eastern Europe.

VON RIBBENTROP TO SPEAK

The news agency made its assertion as diplomatic circles awaited with interest an address Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was scheduled to make tonight (8:15 p. m.—2:15 p. m., E. S. T.) before a war veterans' organization in Danzig.

Government quarters said Ribbentrop would make "an important contribution" to the trend of affairs in the European war, but gave no hint of the nature of his contribution.

DNB's statement, however, apparently eliminated the possibility Hitler might have commissioned his foreign minister to make another peace gesture.

Asserting Great Britain had "brusquely rejected Hitler's outstretched hand, thereby clarifying the situation for us," DNB said:

"We have not the slightest reason to set up new conditions for a peace initiative on our part. The German conditions are those of the Fuehrer's Reichstag address, and we know of no others."

TURKEY ARMED

Dienst Aus Deutschland, a commentary close to the foreign office, said Turkey, having signed a mutual assistance pact with France and Britain, now found herself in a position resembling that occupied by Poland after she joined the "encirclement front."

Poland's alliance with France and Britain, Dienst Aus Deutschland said, forced Russia to assert her claims as an Eastern European power "quickly and energetically."

Turkey, by a similar alliance, the commentary added, had disturbed the balance of power in the Balkans and transferred the tension from Western Europe to the east.

Thereby, Dienst Aus Deutschland asserted, Turkey "created mistrust among powers with legitimate interests in this region—Germany, Russia and Italy."

Military dispatches said the Western Front remained quiet "except for artillery and reconnoitering activity."

American Pair Held as Spies

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 24 (AP)—Two Americans, identified by Swedish police as John Gray Faron and George Evered Kidder-Smith—both graduates of Princeton University—were among 11 foreigners under arrest here today on suspicion of espionage.

The police alleged the Americans were carrying cameras during a visit to a hilltop children's home, and showed suspicious interest in surrounding military objectives.

Both Americans vigorously denied they had taken any pictures of military value, but pending development of the film in their cameras, they were kept in custody.

TURK TROOPS FACE SOVIETS

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Oct. 24 (INS) Three hundred thousand Turkish troops today confronted large concentrations of Soviet forces below the transcaucasus region in defiance of Moscow's demands that a slice of present Turkish territory be ceded to the neighboring Armenian Soviet.

The land sought by Armenia now immediately west of that unit of the U. S. 3. R., and includes the towns of Kars and Ardahan.

This section, now forming a Turkish province, belonged to Czarist Russia, when it had an area of 7200 square miles. In 1920 it was ceded to Turkey by Armenia.

Until 1924 the Kars-Ardahan section was part of Turkish Armenia. It has a combined Armenian and Moslem populace, speaking a mixture of Russian and Turkish. To the north is Georgia, birthplace of Joseph Stalin and ancestral home of the famous Russian family.

The desired province presents one of the stumbling blocks in the recent vain Russo-Turkish peace negotiations in Moscow.

While massing troops in Transcaucasia, the Soviets were said to have told Turkish Foreign Minister Sukut that reunion of the province with Armenia was an essential part of any agreement with Turkey.

Turkey refused flatly, and massed 300,000 troops in the province.

Double U. S. Air, Sea Forces, Bates' Plea

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP)—Rep. Bates (R.) of Massachusetts said today the United States' fleet was insufficient to protect "both our shores at the same time" and asked naval officials to determine the cost of doubling navy ships, submarines and planes.

Reds Hit U. S. Jap 'Pressure'

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 (AP)—A special dispatch from Shanghai to the government newspaper Ivestia today accused the United States of trying to block improvement in Soviet Russian-Japanese relations. Quoting "responsible quarters," the dispatch said:

"Agents of Washington are active in trying to put pressure on the Japanese government because of Japan's dependence upon imports from the United States. Japan would like to improve her relations with the U. S. S. R.," the dispatch added, "but meets great resistance from representatives of the United States because improvement of Soviet-Japanese relations would strengthen Japan—which does not correspond to United States' interests."

Kermit Roosevelt Training in Britain

LONDON, Oct. 24 (INS)—Kermit Roosevelt, son of the late "T. R.," today was gazetted a second lieutenant in the British Middlesex Regiment.

He will undergo two months of training at a machine-gun section depot near London as acting major, after which he will go to a special school for graduation as a machine-gun specialist.

He proposed that the House naval affairs committee of which he is a member recommend appointment of a special board of naval officers to consider "enlarging our fleet to meet changing world conditions."

"We must determine," he said in an interview, "whether we are to depend on some other fleet's aid or to be able to defend both our coasts alone."

Saying the Navy personnel in the United States was "superior to that of any other nation," Bates added he would "depend on Navy Department recommendations for policy and that is the unanimous feeling of the entire House committee."

Bates declared there was need of more combat ships to replace old age vessels.

He suggested the Navy Department estimate the cost of doubling its fleet, increasing the personnel and maintaining shore establishments for such a fleet.

"As a result of our co-operation with the navy and looking ahead," he said, "our naval establishment is at its highest standard in history."

"But if some nations in Europe and Asia should ever get the idea of ganging up on the United States, the richest nation in the world, we should be concerned about our ability to defend both shores."

India Divided On Aid to Britain

WARDHA, India, Oct. 24 (INS)—India, with its vast man-power and resources, today stood widely divided on the question of supporting Britain in the war with Germany.

Against the powerful opposition of the India Congress party, led by the aging Mohandas K. Gandhi, the Maharsia of Bikaner, the most popular and best-known of the Indian princes, appealed to Indians to "spurn blandishments and threats aimed to traduce you from your duty, and rally to the support of the British flag."

"We princes," he said, "stand with swords drawn around the King-Emperor's throne. We are ready to risk our lives, to stake all in conforming to the traditions of our religion and loyalty."

"We must not forget that should Hitler win the war, all talk of freedom and democracy for India will vanish, and brute force and the doctrine that 'might is right' will reign supreme."

Report Hitler Will Dissolve Catholics

LONDON, Oct. 24 (NS)—The Daily Sketch, one of Britain's more sensational tabloids, today asserted that Chancellor Hitler instructed Bernhard Rust, minister of education, to prepare for dissolution of the Roman Catholic Church before the year-end.

T "Deutsche Christen Nazi" group in January will proclaim a constitutional national church in which Hitler will be the highest official, supplanting the Pope in authority, the Daily Sketch averred.

Germans Massing Opposite Belgium

BY KENNETH T. DOWNS

International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Oct. 24 (INS)—Most of Germany's powerful mechanized forces, it was learned today, have been concentrated opposite Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—and it will be through here, French military experts predicted, that the spearhead of Germany's attack will come.

Five heavy mechanized divisions, four light mobile divisions, and four motorized divisions—manned by more than 100,000 men—are massed in the long triangle with the neutrals' borders on the west, the Rhine on the east, and the Moselle river forming the base.

Military sources in Paris still expect a German offensive this autumn, but they agree that the uncountable delay on the part of the Germans has added mountainous handicaps to the potential attacker's task, especially because of the recent heavy rainfall.

Mr. Weatherly was a producer, not a theatrical agent, and he made little headway with the promotion of the careers of Dixon and Garry. . . . So he tore the contract in quarter-pieces, gave the youngsters an encouraging pat on the back and bade them luck and godspeed.

WELL, WHATEVER ELSE HAPPENED at the premiere of "Nice Goin'", a dancing-juvenile, with a superb talent for light comedy, by the name of Lee Dixon made the biggest hit for an unknown since a girl named Mary Martin bowled them over last season with the singing of a song "My Heart Belongs to Daddy". . . . He was great, according to all reports. . . . Your correspondent was fortunate in getting a poll of the visiting New York theatrical agents and there was a new of them present. . . . These birds are the best barometer of an unknown's success, because the 10 per centers score heaviest financially through the "discovery" of unknowns. . . . Unanimously early this morning they were hot on the trail of Mr. Dixon. . . . And here is a scene which gave your reporter a laugh. . . . In the Mayfair, after the show, a group of these Gotham agents were all talking about Mr. Dixon. . . . One of them called out to Mr. Weatherly, who is in town as press agent for his former partner, Dwight Deere Wiman's "Morning at Seven," a question. . . . Mr. Weatherly, of course, had attended the premiere of "Nice Goin'".

"HEY, TOM!" cried the ten per center. "Do you happen to know who owns Lee Dixon's contract?" . . . Mr. Dixon was slow in answering. . . . As a matter of fact, he summoned the waiter and asked for his check, before answering. . . . Then he walked over to the neighboring cluster of theatrical agents and answered, somewhat grimly: "No, I don't know who has his contract. . . . But I do know who had it. . . . I had it!" . . . Mr. Weatherly then, to the accompaniment of sympathetic headbaking by the astonished bevy of the boys, walked out.

SO THAT FOR A LAUGH—and this for a sigh. . . . Seated inconspicuously in the auditorium as the actors of "Nice Goin'" were going through their paces, was a pretty, red-haired girl. . . . Our informant says he couldn't refrain from stealing an occasional glance in her direction. . . . He says that her nervousness was so great that her program was in tatters at the finish. . . . Once, she was—aided from a professional relationship—very much in love with young Mr. Dixon, and he with her. . . . Although we are not positive about it, it seems that we recall that Lee and she were married. . . . Be that as it was, there's a new Mrs. Dixon now, one of the most beautiful girls in New York. . . . But the pretty little redhead in last night's audience probably wasn't thinking of that. . . . She was watching her former partner, the youth with whom she had played most of the jems in the nightclub circuit, playing the part of "Dynamite" Jones to Miss Mary Martin's "Stonewall" Jackson. . . . She was Miss Jean Garry, Mr. Dixon's partner until three years ago.

WOMEN NOTABLES JOIN N. E. DAYS' CAMPAIGN

Prominent Greater Boston women joined today in lauding the second annual "New England Days for New England Prosperity" campaign as a stimulant to farm and industrial activity throughout the six northeastern states.

This ten-day campaign was launched Oct. 19 under sponsorship of 13 New England chain store groups, with support of the New England Council's Marketing Committee.

Miss Eleanor W. Bateman, of the State Department of Agriculture, division of markets, said today: "The New England Days campaign is serving to open eyes, sharpen ears and awaken minds of the public to the industrial and agricultural products of New England available in our markets."

Mrs. Gladys Beckett Jones, director of the Garland school of Boston, said:

"New Englanders are far too modest. If other sections of the country had the apples, the strawberries, the grapes, the furniture and wallpaper artisans we have in New England, quite a shout would go up. New England Days should make us more conscious and prouder of our assets."

Mrs. Frances Beamer Russ of Hingham, charming young housewife named as New England's Miss Typical Consumer, was on her way by airplane today to Montpelier, Vt., and Concord, N. H., to receive congratulations of the governors of those two states. She visited Maine yesterday.

Hollywood Paragraphs

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 24—Death Valley Scotty practically had to be trapped into working as a technical adviser on "Virginia City."

For years various studios have gone gunning for our famous desert character offering him plenty of do, re, mi for his advice on pictures about the great open spaces. But he refused them all until a friend of his, Elmer Fryer, the portrait photographer, approached him about the Warner picture just for the fun of it.

"That's more like it," said Senior Scotty, "I don't have to work for money—but fun is something else again."

Just learned that Merle Oberon's contract with Warners is apt to be permanent. When she finishes "We Shall Meet Again" she will be starred in their prize package, "Hush," which is best seller, "All This and Heaven Too."

Chinese Dance Star Big Hit at Gayety

Most beautiful of Sen Lee's company of "Oriental China Dolls," the Gayety's stage show, is China Doll Sen Lee herself. Her native Chinese dances are strange and wonderful and entirely new to Gayety audiences. Other skilled and attention getting dancers this week are blonde Ina Thomas, Wanda Morlan and Delores Delray.

Keith's 'Intermezzo' Splendid Production

By PEGGY DOYLE

Easily the most delightful discovery of the year is Ingrid Bergman's American debut in David O. Selznick's "Intermezzo, a Love Story," charming and simply told screen story now un-reeling on Keith Memorial screen.

Sweden's Miss Bergman has fresh serene beauty that is as different from the standardized Hollywood glamour job as day and night. She is a young actress but she has amazing flexibility and emotional capacity.

Co-starring with Leslie Howard and Edna Best, who give excellent performances, it is Miss Bergman, however, whose arresting talent gives this beautifully made production its spine-tingling quality.

"Intermezzo" is probably the season's most carefully named picture as the Selznick publicity office points out. The word, intermezzo, in musical use, is a sort of intermediate piece—a diversion occurring during the course of a musical composition briefly and then disappearing, never again to be repeated.

As the young girl pianist who instructs Ann Todd, Leslie Howard's daughter, Sweden's Miss Bergman meets and falls in love with the great concert pianist.

Distressed at her unhappy situation, she tries to run away. But Howard persuades her to go on tour with him as his accompanist, for she is an exceptionally talented pianist. Following the tour, the two vacation on the Riviera. Here, John Halliday finds them, informs the girl that she has won the music scholarship she has worked for so tirelessly and acquaints the man with conditions at home, particularly stressing his small daughter's yearning for his homecoming.

The girl, realizing their romance is but an interlude and that she cannot make up to him the loss of his family, departs quietly without informing Howard of her intention.

Howard, returning home for a glimpse of his daughter, discovers she has been injured in an automobile accident. The vigil at the child's bedside reunites the straying celebrity to his family, revealing to him that his recent love was but an intermezzo in his life, deep-rooted but short-lived.

It is a beautiful production, with a cast that is splendid throughout and thoughtful direction by Gregory Ratoff. The music, moments, with Howard playing the violin and Miss Bergman the piano represent the most skillful of dubbing and are worth listening to, besides.

Co-starring on Keith-Memorial screen is Producer Joe Pasternak's newest discovery, little Gloria Jean, in Universal's "The Underpup." It is worth a review on its own—it's that good—and it will get it tomorrow.

Roxanne, Sunya Star at Howard

Roxanne and Sunya "Smiles" Shant share the royal throne in "Queens of Bohemia," the Old Howard's current burlesque revue which is meeting with the customers' enthusiastic approval. Both are introducing new and sensational dance routines. Leading the laugh legion are Mike Sacks, I. B. Hamp, Billy Crooks and Jack O'Malley. There is a large cast including the 30 song-and-dance girls.

MASSEY'S INSPIRED LINCOLN PORTRAYAL THRILLS AUDIENCE

Sterling Acting By Whole Cast

By PEGGY DOYLE

Robert Emmet Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," which opened a year ago on Broadway and played through the season to large and enthusiastic audiences, was staged at the Boston Opera House last night.

It has been said before—and will be said again—that this is Mr. Sherwood's finest play and the greatest Lincoln play to date. It is inspired and inspiring, and if you substitute the word dictatorship for the word slavery throughout Mr. Sherwood's script it is as timely today as it was in those troublous days preceding the Civil War.

Writing with compassion and simplicity, Mr. Sherwood reveals to us the despairing loneliness of the man who met his destiny so reluctantly; who was forced to assert his greatness by the ambitions of others.

Lincoln's 30 years in Illinois, a time largely filled with the melancholy doubts of a man who considered himself a failure, provide the material for the Sherwood play. He is shown first, as an irresponsible, gangling lad studying with Mentor Graham, his teacher, friend and landlord, in the latter's New Salem log cabin. We see him finally as the gaunt, unhappy giant among pygmies, leaving Springfield to become President at one of the darkest moments in our history.

The play's twelve scenes form a composite of the influences that molded the homely prairie lawyer into America's most idolized hero. Not the least important of these influences were those wielded unwittingly by sweet Ann Rutledge, whose loss kept her forever in his heart, and Mary Todd, whose insatiable ambition drove him to loneliness—and greatness.

Raymond Massey's Lincoln is a beautiful performance, as inspired as is Mr. Sherwood's play. It is a happy accident that he looks the part but his Lincoln is more than a physical counterpart of the man. It is soul-deep. All the brooding melancholy of the man, the indecisiveness that persisted until he was forced to meet great issues, the humanness, the unaffected honesty, the genuine simplicity—these are the web and woof of Massey's magnificent Lincoln.

And what a terrifically long part it is, including one of the longest speeches in the theater. Massey is on the stage most of the time. In the third act, answering Stephen A. Douglas in debate, he speaks in words as timely as tomorrow's.

Laurette Taylor Superb

An impressively dressy first night audience passed up a new musical and a Pulitzer prize winner to attend the opening of "Outward Bound" at the Plymouth last night, and was unanimously happy with its choice.

Little can be said about the play that has not already been written. A poignantly lovely drama concerning life and death, written by Sutton Dane and first produced in 1923, it passes the test of time beautifully.

As for the playing—well, that is something to tell your grandchildren about. Laurette Taylor comes back to the stage after an absence of a decade to give a performance, as Mrs. Mudgett, that places her forever on the roster of really great actresses of all time.

In the role originally played by Beryl Mercer, Miss Taylor brings out all the pathos, dignity and comedy of the role of the character whom death suddenly places on an equal footing with her erstwhile betters. According to those who saw both performances, this one far surpasses the interpretation of the original.

The original production had a cast that included Charlotte Granville, Beryl Mercer, Alfred Lunt, Helen Chandler, Margalo Glimore and Leslie Howard. Despite the cast and the raves of the reviewer, however, the play ran only three months on Broadway.

The current revival boasts of a star-studded cast, too, and has generally been conceded to be the better presentation. Florence Reed brings her great talent to the role of Mrs. Clivedon Banks; Harry Belafonte, that brilliant young actor, does a superb job as Prior; Louis Hector plays the personal captain of industry magnificently, and Morgan Farley's Scrubby sets a mark for any actor to shoot at.

Such a cast should have a Barrymore, and it has. The youngest member of the theatrical royal family, Diana Barrymore, makes her real debut in the role of Anna, the "Half-way."

A summer spent working hard at Ogunquit, Me., did much to develop the Barrymore talent which Diana indubitably inherits. She and Henry Richards, who play the suicidal young lovers, have not quite enough of the mystical quality needed, but that is quibbling. Miss Barrymore stands up excellently with competition the like of which is seldom seen on the stage.

Stephen Courleigh, as the clergyman, and Reynolds Dennison, who plays the Examiner, maintain the high standard of the play. Congratulations to William Brady for reviving "Outward Bound."

THE SKY RAIL

IT was a grimly comic setting there in the upper theater of war—grim and tense for one actor, comfortable amusement for the other over his foe's plight.

But Lieut. Eddie Rickenbacker had mercy in his soul and from that mercy flowered an idea as daring as any conceived by the air vikings jousting above the Western Front.

He would take this member of the Richthofen Flying Circus captive in mid-air and drive him back a prisoner, with the red-nosed Fokker intact as a triumphal prize.

A full 10,000 feet below straggled the scars that were the German support trenches. Just under him the German from the famous Boche squadron had stalled, standing almost on his tail. Now he began toppling back in a ludicrous tail-slip.

Perhaps he was wondering why that devil American in the Spad, carrying the insignia of a hat in a ring, didn't finish him or at least begin some attack so that he might know which way to head his last dive.

"His propeller was standing absolutely still," said Rickenbacker afterward. "I could see the color and the laminations of the wood, so close was I to him. 'I had met with him only a few minutes before. I'd thought the day's work was over when I noticed something going on to the east, in the direction of Bantheville."

"I started over, climbing, to get a look at this thing. To my surprise I found that one of our Liberty bombing machines—those clumsy flaming coffins—had been left behind and was in distress, with a single enemy Fokker on his tail.

"The Liberty pilot was kicking his ship around and his gunner, at the rear, was holding the Boche at bay, when I picked down and caught the German unawares."

"The Liberty motor was almost dead, either from a bullet or from some trouble of its own. The poor pilot had all he could do to maintain headway without that goggle-eyed German taking pot shots at him."

"Each time the American banked the Liberty it dropped two or three hundred feet. The Fokker had only to worry him enough and the Yanks would have to land in German territory, captives."

"As I started firing, the German pilot, so intent on his prize that he had forgotten to watch his own rear, zoomed up suddenly to let me pass under him. But that was too old a dodge. I pulled up just as suddenly and came out on top."

Then Rick's eyes almost popped behind his goggles. He had been prepared to let go both guns again but now he halted. What was this?

The Fokker with the red nose had stalled half up his loop. The Boche was almost on dead center, standing on his tail, and there he hung, it seemed to Rick, for seconds.

Then came the brazen idea to Rickenbacker, former daredevil of the motor speedways and former chauffeur for General John J. Pershing, the A. E. F. commander-in-chief.

As the Fokker finally rocked back, tail first, Rick spat over between the Boche and the German lines and fired a couple of bursts from his twin guns, to show the motorless German that business was meant.

Now indeed the tables were turned. Instead of the Boche nursing homeward to Germany a crippled American machine, Rick was impressing upon the disgusted German the idea that he and his famous Circus ship were to be herded back to a Yankee field.

What a triumphant entry this would make, with one of late Baron von Richthofen's celebrated fighting machines and its crack pilot.

Like a collie guiding back a lost sheep, the chuckling Rickenbacker drove his German across the lines for home. A short burst of gunfire on the left and the Boche, sighting the incendiaries flitting by, veered dutifully to the right.

A short burst to the right and the German edged to the left. It was as simple as that.

"I compelled him to steer for the Exermont field, which lay just about four miles behind our front," said Rick. "He willingly complied, apparently quite content to play fair with me and spare his Fokker, since I had spared him his life."

"Of course I was fully aware that he might attempt to set fire to his machine as soon as he touched the ground. I should have done the same in his spot."

"But I had figured that one out. With his dead engine he could not change his course once he began to settle to the ground. I'd put myself right behind him and if he attempted to destroy the plane I'd shoot him on the spot."

This plan in mind, Rick withdrew as the German was making his last circle over the field at about 300 feet. Rick's fame was to turn and land just behind his captive.

Then came one of Rick's most disappointing moments. From out of nowhere a Spad suddenly appeared and began firing at the German at long range.

Whipping madly back, Rickenbacker dove down and raced between the Spad and the Fokker, firing a short burst to warn the former away.

DAILY THE Spad raced away, understanding, but the damage had been done. The German, dismayed by this inhospitable welcome to a strange field, had turned right in panic, instead of left, to where he had been guided.

Out of position, the German overshoot the field. From his plane, the embittered Rickenbacker watched the red-nosed Fokker scatter to pieces against the edge of an opposite copse of woods.

True enough the Boche, only slightly hurt, was made captive, but the prize of the ship was gone.

Well—just one of those things. Rick had laughed off disappointments before, rocking over on one wing as 'e crossed the field he waved to his erstwhile prisoner and was gone.

But there was compensation back at his home field the field of the 94th Aero Squadron where Rick had succeeded Maj. Raoul Lufbery in command. For Lieut. Rickenbacker there was awaiting a notification. He had been promoted to captain.

Some fun all right for one day, and Rick got credit for a German plane removed from the skies. It was not all fun, how-

by Paul Whelton
Staff Writer and World War Flyer

The following is explanatory of some of the terms used by the Sky Raiders of the World War:

Penguin: monoplane (usually Bleriot) with clipped wings and 3-cyl. motors, incapable of sustained flight and used for practice at controls on the ground.

Mitrailleuse: machine gun, or guns.

Biplace: two seats, a two-seater plane.

Meter: roughly three times a foot; i. e., 5000 meters, 15,000 feet.

Pique: a dive.

Vrille: a spin, with the motor as axis and the wings circling in the descent.

Avion: an airplane.

ever. Enemy planes were almost universally shot down the hard way.

Thus Rick was to work to get the 25th and on the same day—the 20th of October in 1918—the last planes accredited to Germany.

The final machine also was a redoubtable German Cirrus and Rick knocked it down in the afternoon after he had completed his own patrol and had gone to bed. As commander of the 94th, he observed how the boys were doing.

One day Lieut. Douglas Campbell, Capt. Hamilton, Col. and Maj. James A. Meissner of Brooklyn, N. Y., were on patrol north of Toul when they were assailed by four German aviators.

Diving, looping and performing acrobatic stunts through the book of acrobatic life-saving acrobatics which meant the difference between existence and extinction—the three Yankees battled the four Boches.

Afterward, observers reported that of all dog fights they had witnessed, but the most spectacular came after Jimmy Meissner, a 22-year-old daredevil, had taken off part of a wing in collision with a German in the melee.

Rickenbacker had downed one of the Boches, but the other three were engaged with Meissner alone as Rick was temporarily out of the fight, were left back.

With a diving wrench, a whole section tore away from Meissner's wing and he rammed the Boche. The side was at once cut away, Meissner's only hope for getting down was to fly straight ahead, controlling down the well side, up on the other flying straight ahead.

INSTANTLY, however, the attacking Rickenbacker and Campbell sized up the situation. With dual guns blazing, the pair ploughed into the Germans, scattering them and then fell in beside the worried Meissner as he whistled down the wind.

They got back and Meissner made a nice three-point landing on his nose and both knees—but he walked away from it, although not happily.

It was another day for Rick, who became an American ace because, as a boy, he had seen a man with a cigar in his mouth drive a car at 80 miles an hour at Columbus, Ohio. The man was Barney Oldfield and it was he who inspired in young Edward Vernon Rickenbacker the desire to be a race driver.

If he had not become a race driver, Rick never would have been chauffeur for Pershing, and if he had not been Pershing's chauffeur, he has said himself, he would have been unable to get into the air service to become America's leading ace.

During his service fellow pilots often joshed him and warned that if he lived through a crack-up behind the German lines he would be treated as a renegade German.

Eddie took it all in spirit, however, because although his father was a German and his mother French, they had lived more in Switzerland and finally had emigrated and settled at Columbus.

There Eddie was born Oct. 8, 1880, the third of seven children and unable to attend school beyond the seventh grade because of financial circumstances in the home. When he was 12, his father died and Eddie started out to get a job immediately.

His first was with a glass company, where he labored 12 hours a night carrying bottles from the furnace, receiving $3.50 a week. He thought he could do better and he quit one morning at 3 o'clock and walked a few blocks to a foundry, where he got work at making cores for $1 a day.

Next he shifted to a shoe factory, but meanwhile he cherished an ambition to be an artist and had begun to take lessons at night school. Casting about for employment where he could utilize this talent, the best he could find was a job with a monument works, chipping letters and designs at $1 a day.

In a cemetery at Columbus there stands today a shaft which he carved to mark the last resting place of his father.

When young Rick saw Barney

Oldfield race around a track with an auto tied over in his mouth, the boy put thoughts of an art career behind him. He wanted to be a race driver.

To this end he secured a job in a garage, where he learned about motors and maneuvered acquaintance with several race drivers. Through them he became a riding mechanic, serving this apprenticeship for three years.

Then, in 1909 when he was not yet 19, he had the thrill of driving his first auto race and began to build up the reputation as a daredevil that followed him overseas.

SOON he became known on the tracks as "that Rickenbacker kid—the front runner."

There are three major types of race drivers. The majority are "drifters" who prefer to stay well up in the van but hate to be out setting the pace.

Young Eddie Rickenbacker was of the small minority styled "front runners." His method was to try and get out in front as quickly as possible and stay there as long as his car held up, a method which he carried successfully into aerial warfare.

"The records of my races, particularly the winning races, will show that I led most of the way," Rick once said.

He turned over occasionally, or hit a fence or was the victim of some other mishap, but these were through unforeseen circumstances.

"I know I've been called a daredevil," he said, "but that's a term that hints of recklessness, and frankly I've never been reckless. I mean I've never taken long chances, when I knew the odds were against me."

"I've been daring, I suppose. If you look at it that way, but behind every performance, either in racing or in aerial fighting, whether or not it appeared to be spectacular, there

KEEP U. S. OUT OF WAR —Be Neutral—

THE HOME and family life have always been important in New England. From the days of the Pilgrims, fathers, mothers, sons and daughters have stood together, loyally and inseparably.

In the Colonial period, when men chose to venture to the North and West, they did not go alone. Their families went with them, each member prepared to bear the suffering as well as to share the joys.

fodder for Europe's dictators, find this organization expressing gloriously and effectively their own hope and determination.

New England mothers oppose the sending of American troops to fight on foreign soil.

New England mothers want to support an active program for adequate national defense.

New England mothers are against subversive groups whose object is the destruction of the American form of government—the only form of government that allows New England family life to exist.

Like Mrs. Helena Magnus of Milton, they are rallying to the call of the National League of Mothers of America, organizing units in all communities and seeking strong representation everywhere.

And in one voice they are asking:

Who can have better reason or better authority to oppose American participation in foreign wars than the mothers of America?

Who suffers greater sorrow, endures greater loss, undergoes greater hardship or pays a greater price in war than the mothers of the nation?

NEW HAMPSHIRE LEARNS that there is more than one way to kill a cat. Five years ago the presence of a number of Gretna Greens, notably Salem and Seabrook, along the State's border caused many an official headache.

It was not uncommon for a town with a population of less than 4000 to record as many as 600 marriages in the course of a year.

Churches and moralists cried out in vain. But, year after year, the situation continued unchanged. Thousands of couples were quickly and secretly wed.

At length, the General Court at Concord adopted a "blood test" law which required men and women who filed marriage intentions to submit to medical examinations and to wait several days for the results.

Today, few bridal parties are heading towards the border towns, and many of their own residents are going to Maine and Massachusetts for nuptial ceremonies.

There are several New Hampshire people who say that the real reason for the adoption of the "blood test" law was to curb the activities of Gretna Greens. We wonder.

"WAR SMOTHERS NEWS," mourns "March of Events" writer, Benjamin DeCasseres, calling public attention to the fact that the 300th anniversary of the setting up of America's first printing press in Cambridge passed by with little or no mention in newspapers.

Our friend might have gone further and said more. War's journalistic crimes are not confined to unintentional "blackouts" of important happenings. War is often guilty of deliberate deceit.

News from belligerent nations is subject to censorship. It is frequently misleading. It can be purposely untrue.

Embattled governments, each striving to avert discontent at home and hatred abroad, do not look kindly upon reports that are favorable to the other fellow.

Consequently it is not only the right but the DUTY of every American citizen to do HIS OWN thinking, to hold to HIS OWN beliefs, and not to permit himself or his country to become the unfortunate victim of emotionalism or by ag propaganda.

Human Side of News -1-

By EDWIN C. HILL

ONE WOULD fancy a lean, grim, eagle-beaked man for Air Minister in wartime, the Lord Kitchener type. But in England it's plump little Sir Kingsley Wood, round as a tennis ball and known as the "Cherub," who marshals the air legions at a moment when it appears that this war may resolve itself into a trial of strength in the air.

Currently, Sir Kingsley outlines in Parliament vast and diligent enterprise in concentrating all the air of the empire, with a round up of planes, materials and pilots in all the dominions. He lacks showmanship, though, and his report was dry and statistical.

The much showier Winston Churchill took the play away from him. His listeners indicated that their chairs were pretty hard before he had finished, but they gave him a nice hand, calm in their confidence in the air chief.

Sir Kingsley is a demon for detail, which is what it takes, perhaps more than showmanship, in readying an air fleet in wartime.

SIR KINGSLEY is barely five feet tall. Winston Churchill has taken an impish delight in the past in ally putting him on the spot. When Labor members sought to censure Sir Kingsley in May, 1933, Churchill came through with an assist, in an observation that, in selecting Sir Kingsley for the Air Ministry they had "put a round peg in a square hole."

WINSTON CHURCHILL

The joke blew a fuse on the moment of tension, as it frequently does in the British Parliament, and the vote of censure was swept away in a roar of laughter.

Besides, some of the members thought it wasn't sporting for Churchill to bedevil Sir Kingsley that way, and they were for keeping him on the job. By all accounts they are satisfied.

A. P. Herbert, the Parliamentary humorist who spoofed the archaic British divorce laws off the books, has a high score in de-railing ill-feeling by a joke. So it was when, in the heightening tension of a debate on Communism and Fascism, he cracked, "A plague on both your blouses."

This won't be figured in as a component of the British "way of life," when the war aims are finally stated, but it is illustrative of treasured and unique traditions, definitely at stake in what may be history's most drastic shake-up of all things serious and comic.

SIR KINGSLEY is the British equivalent of the born hustler of the American tradition, never still a minute, busier than a trapper, quick in the head and quick on his feet, for one his build.

Up from obscurity, he was a solicitor before joining the Health Secretariat in 1919. He was advanced by his penchant for getting things done, all sorts of things. He was the best master the Worshipful Guild of Wheelwrights ever had.

For years he has carried on a relentless war against the common cold. If he is as diligent in recruiting and deploying his air force, this fight is in the bag. With amazing energy and persistence, he recruited the nation for a voluntary daily physical drill called the "jerk," which diligently pursued, he insisted would make a hammer-thrower out of the scrawniest little Limehouse cockney.

MY DAY.

HYDE PARK, Oct. 24—We had a very pleasant lunch with Mrs. Lewis Lawes at the warden's house in Sing Sing, and then saw a most interesting exhibition of the physical training given to the guards in the Central Guard School.

This school was, I think, the first one established in any State and has been discontinued this year because the State Legislature, as an economy measure, cut off the appropriation.

There were two photographs in the program which showed guards as they looked in 1880 and as they look today. I think those photographs are the most eloquent justification of holding a guard school.

It is not just physical fitness which is important, though that in itself is a great thing. A man who feels well and moves easily is always temperamentally more fitted to do a difficult job.

IN THIS particular case drill, calisthenics, jiu jitsu, boxing, wrestling and the defense taught to meet sudden attacks have an important bearing on the confidence which the guards have in themselves.

A man is much less apt to be a bully and to bolster up his morale by bluster and cruelty if he is entirely sure of his own physical adequacy.

In this school the guards were given many other courses, such as psychology and a knowledge of the criminal law and, penal code, but, just as in English education, great stress has always been laid on the value of "the playing fields of Eton," so would I lay great stress on the value of this physical development.

The Sing Sing band is extraordinarily good and I enjoyed hearing it play, and was only distressed that I missed seeing the trick dog, which through his cleverness has won the permission of Warden Lawes to remain with his master in prison.

I understand that he knows some hundred odd tricks and when they say "Warden" or "P. K." to him he runs to his hiding place and closes and locks the door.

It is many years since I have visited Sing Sing and there seems to me to be a great improvement in its physical condition. I am primarily interested, of course, in what we can do to help people in prison to rehabilitate themselves. Physical environment and proper treatment by the guards has a great deal to do with the success of both probation and parole later on.

WE CAME up to Hyde Park later, and I grieve to say that the colors are already fading and the leaves are blowing off the trees. Nevertheless, it is good to be in the country.

Sunday morning the Bible presented to St. James Church was dedicated and we all attended the services.

PRESIDENT FINDS WHIMS UNSAFE

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—When President Roosevelt signed the executive order continuing for two years the reduced rates of postage on books, Hervey Allen, Mark van Doren and Carl Carmer attended the ceremonies... They, together with other distinguished authors, came to Washington as an expression of gratitude for this action which helps bring satisfaction to the literature lovers of America... "You should put it in statute form instead of having it enacted by executive order," the President suggested to Allen. "It's never safe to depend on the whim of a President."

THE RANEE OF SARAWAK, wife of "The White Rajah," will remain in America and soon will start a lecture tour. The Ranees told a group about her plans to live here. "Okay, then," proposed Teddy Powell, the band leader, "how about joining my orchestra—as a vocalist?" "No, thank you very much," the Ranees declined. "I'd like you to give the job to my daughter, the Princess Baba." . . . When "Gulliver's Travels," the new animated cartoon rival for "Snow White," is released it will be delivered to movie operators via plane. The plane will bear the sign: "Gulliver Travels by Air" . . . Mason and other noted French artists of military age have been conscripted into the Camouflage Department of France's army.

PRINCESS BABA

ELLIOT PAUL, author of "Life and Death of a Spanish Town," just returned from Paris, where he lived in the same house with Gen. de Castelnau, who won World War renown as the Defender of Nancy... The General, who is 86 years old, lives on the sixth floor of that apartment house, but never failed to appear in the air-raid shelter in the basement during the raid-warning rehearsals. . . . Paul asked him why he descended six flights to the shelter and then up again each time. . . . "It's not that I want to live longer," Gen. de Castelnau explained. "But I feel I should set an example to the people in the neighborhood."

THE UNITED STATES will participate at the fair in Rome. If Commissioner Ed Flynn is well enough to travel, he and his aide, Teddy Hayes, will go to Rome shortly to arrange for an exhibit there. . . . The Poster Division of the Federal Art Project yesterday was assigned to making recruiting posters for the United States Army.

HOLLAND will send one million tulip bulbs to the New York World's Fair for 1940. . . . Read Raymond Gram Swing's "How War Came," an excellent Resume of It All. . . . Billy K. Welles, the script writer, will write the next show at Leon and Eddie's.

ALL THE DRAMA in the now historic battle between "Dynamite" Jones and "Stonewall" Jackson was not confined to the stage of that theater where "Nice Goin'" had its premiere last night. . . . "Dynamite" Jones and "Stonewall" Jackson are the protagonists in "Nice Goin'". . . . They are by way of being famous characters in the archives of Broadway, because seven or eight years ago, "Dynamite" and Miss "Stonewall" battled their way through three acts of a show called "Sailor, Beware". . . . And because the prizes at stake were (1) the reputation of "Dynamite" for being the Great Lover of the Atlantic fleet, and (2) Miss "Stonewall's" retention of an embargo against delivery of her charms on a cash and carry, crash and tarry, mash and marry basis or any other kind of basis—the play was the talk of N' York and a huge hit. . . . This was a daring premise for a play in 1931 and later, the premise and its conclusion were too daring altogether for the Mansfield administration in Boston. . . . Hence the meeting of Boston and "Dynamite" Jones and "Stonewall" Jackson has been postponed. . . . Now, with the explanation that "Nice Goin'" is a musical adaptation of "Sailor, Beware," we'll go on with the story, namely—

THAT ALL THE DRAMA last night was not confined to the stage. . . . About the time (circa 1931) that "Sailor, Beware" was proving that an entertaining play is going to find an audience however deep the depression, two young hoodlers caught the fancy of Tom Weatherly, a New York producer. . . . One was Jean Garry, a comely red-head who had style and agility and sock. . . . The other was Lee Dixon, a gangling Buddy Ebsen-ish type, who could certainly hoof like the deuce and who had a boyish charm which audiences liked. . . . Mr. Weatherly, that year, was doing very well. . . . He owned 20 per cent of a musical show called "She Loves Me Not," and that attraction was also amazing the New York weissenheimers by selling out in a town which had been sold out by the brokers. . . . Weatherly had had previous hits, in partnership with Dwight Deere Wiman, and the "Little Shows" were among them. . . . His rating was Grade-A in the Times Square purities, and when he took such a fancy to the young pair of dancers, Dixon and Garry, that he signed them to a contract—then the team's future seemed fairly bright.

BUT THERE WAS VERY LITTLE production of musical plays in those various times. . . . A year or two later, the situation wasn't much changed. . . . But Billy Rose had undertaken a new venture with the coming of Repel, and he named it "The Casino de Paris," first of the mammoth theater-restaurants to greet the country's going legally wet. . . . Mr. Weatherly sent Dancers Dixon and Garry to his friend Mr. Rose, and the kids took it on the trot. . . . But Mr. Rose, a Behemoth of a Showman in the making, was not impressed. . . . He answered Mr. Weatherly's inquiry with an air of condescension, and a "Sure they can dance. . . . The guy's a sort of Buddy Ebsen. But there is a Buddy Ebsen." . . .

BRITISH MAY 'FREE'
DONAT FOR FILM

By Louella O. Parsons

Robert Donat

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 24—Unless the British government feels that Robert Donat is needed at home he will come to Hollywood to be starred in "I Had a Love Affair," the anti-Nazi story previously scheduled for him in London Victor Saville, the producer, took a trip to Washington to confer with the British ambassador on the advisability of bringing "I Had a Love Affair" to the screen. He was advised to let his conscience be his guide and he says since the story is factual as well as good entertainment he feels that it should be made without delay.

Saville's visit to Washington will probably answer the question that all Hollywood producers have been interested in knowing, that is, whether it is permissible for neutral America to film anti-Nazi stories or forget them.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: The pretty girl with William Holden at the Coconut Grove was Brenda Marshall; the Helen Gilbert-Masna Bakula-hatched divorcee comes up this week; Margaret Sullivan and Leland Hayward were among the dinner guests who helped the Willie Weavers celebrate their first wedding anniversary. MARTHA RAYE knocked the boxoffice records sky high when she did $25,000 worth of business her first six days of personal appearances in Philadelphia; Doris Carson is wearing Jeffrey Lynn's ring and if the knot isn't already tied it won't be long now; Gloria Youngblood, once the heart beat of Rudy Vallee, is back in town wearing a diamond and sapphire ring and telling those who are interested she expects to marry a sports promoter in Havana Christmas Day; Mrs. Myron Selznick is recovering from a slight operation and one of her most constant visitors has been Myron from whom she recently parted.

DAILY STORY The Scar

THE RINGING of the bell was not loud, but Daphne Carr trembled so when she heard it that her spoon filled with "a way out," fell and spilled on the floor. She shoved the spoon under the carpet, tucked the bottle behind the coffee can.

A thin, pretty woman with light hair stood at the door. A boy of perhaps eight leaned heavily against her.

"I beg your pardon. My son has not been well lately. Could I trouble you for a glass of water. We are strangers in this neighborhood and can't find a drugstore." She smiled uncertainly.

"Why, of course, gladly, come in." They followed into the shabby little room and sat down. The boy coughed. He fumbled in his pocket. Mrs. Carr handed him a snowy handkerchief cornered with blue embroidery.

He seemed so frail hunched against the huge sofa pillows. There was a deep scar on his forehead.

PERHAPS the boy was aware of sharp scrutiny as he sipped. For he said, "Daddy has one, too." And he pointed proudly to the scar.

When they left the mother opened her bag, for she was conscious of the sour surroundings. "Thank you so much Mrs. Carr, would you—um—"

"Carr is the name. No, please."

"How odd, my name's Carr, too," said the visitor. "Well, goodbye. Say goodbye, Henry."

They were gone. Again the door was shut and Daphne was alone. The name. The scar. The resemblance.

DAPHNE HAD been 20 years Henry Carr's senior when they married. She knew he married her for her money but refused to admit it even to herself. Finally, he fell in love with another woman and demanded his freedom.

"It was your fault, this May-December wedding. I was too young to know what I was heading for. You were old. You should have known it couldn't work."

In the white heat of anger Daphne picked up a heavy ash tray and struck his temple with deadly accuracy. She ran when she saw him fall. He recovered. There was no scandal. A quiet divorce followed. Daphne scorned a settlement or alimony. She kept running away from her hurt. Always downward.

And now Henry had what he wanted, a wife, a home, a son. Later that evening little Henry told his father of his experience. He proudly showed the "bandkerchief." But the neat initials "D. C." meant nothing to Mr. Carr. He threw it aside. It was just as well. Daphne Carr would never need it washed or ironed again.

LISTEN, WORLD! By Elsie Robinson

"BUT YOU PAY so much when you love like this!" she whispered. "Then pay it, darling. Don't be niggardly with life. Open your arms to it. Be friends with happiness and friends with pain."

Beave words, aren't they? With a sort of challenging beauty ringing through them. They're part of Rose Frank's novel, "Claudia," which Mrs. Roosevelt recently quoted. Part of yourself, too!

"Pay so much for loving"? Of course you do. Anything that's worth the risking has its price. But why whine about it? Why class it as a Grief when it's GROWTH, instead?

You wanted that rapture, didn't you? You asked for that risk. But they weren't possible for you, in your old form. You had to grow up to them. . . . become a grown man or woman. And that adjustment naturally hurt.

BUT WASN'T IT WORTH IT? AREN'T YOU THE PROUDER . . . THE WISER AND THE STRONGER . . . FOR THE STEP YOU'VE TAKEN!

STOP CRYING "See what life did to me—my heart is broken!" Shout, instead, "See what life did FOR me—my heart is OPEN!"

For it's a poor, dark thing—the heart that has never been cracked. And a bitter, tight cell for the one who huddles within—walled in by his own stupidity or fear, conceit or complacency. Shut away, he is, as a babe unborn or the weary dead.

Open your heart to it all . . . making friends with grief as well as pleasure. You'll learn as much from one mistake as from a score of successes. . . . and gain more in one brave loss than from a flock of triumphs.

DARE TO LIVE! Don't worry about the risk or loss or failure. It's never the dying that counts—it's NOT LIVING ENOUGH that's sorrow.

Life always has an ace up her sleeve for the lad who has the courage to take her. . . . But look at the careful and timid who never got under way!

Would you exchange your tear-rimmed, laugh-wrinkled eyes for the stare of their empty sockets?

Would you swap the scars on your battling fists for their manicured suitability?

Or, watching their pompous prance Beside your weary pool, Do you ever regret The hap you got From trying to stride With God?

Smart Set Fashions

When Nip Is in the Air

THERE'S nothing much more important in the wardrobe than a really good-looking between season coat that can go on over a suit or woollen frock when snow blows.

We've heard the plaint lately that it's pretty hard to find something really unusual and smart for the tween-season. Well, here's the answer. A grand tweed coat piped with velvet... or an entirely new way of handling camel's hair fabric, in a fitted number. Grape-toned nubs are the highlight of the tweed, which is a light shade, and the velvet pipings are grape. Sizes 12-20, it's only $12.95.

As for the wasp-waist camel's hair and wool mixture coat, in that light golden tone which is a classic (lined with rayon satin), it's the same price, same size range. For shopping information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIB-erty 4000, week-days until five-thirty, or write.

Cooking

Whole Meal In Casserole

By MARTHA LEE

There's always a bountiful supply of fruits and vegetables throughout the early autumn weeks. Late crops just seem to outdo themselves. Vegetables particularly are bursting with fall fullness and goodness this year — so now's the time to feast on them.

A casserole of scalloped vegetables is a grand meal in itself and a pleasant variation from the usual vegetable plate. This first combination gives a splendid variety of vegetables:

VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

8 small potatoes.
8 small carrots.
10 small onions.
1 small cauliflower.
1 cup canned peas.
4 tbsp. butter.
4 tbsp. flour.
2 cups milk.
½ lb. grated American cheese.
Salt, pepper.
Cook potatoes, carrots, onions and cauliflower (separated into flowerettes) and drain well. Add the drained peas, and place all vegetables in a casserole. Make cream sauce with the butter, flour and milk. Add grated cheese and stir until it is melted. Season to taste. Pour over the vegetables, place under low broiler heat to lightly brown the sauce.

The second suggestion uses a head of cauliflower cooked whole, encircled with a ring of bright green peas and then a ring of plump lima beans. A rich creamy white sauce is poured over the vegetables and topped with well-battered crumbs. Then the casserole is popped into the oven and baked until the crumbs turn a crispy golden brown.

VEGETABLES EN CASSEROLE

1 medium head cauliflower
2 lbs. peas (2 cups shelled)
2 cups lima beans
2 tbsp. butter
4 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt
1-2 cups liquid from vegetables

Buttered crumbs
Boil vegetables in salted water until tender. The cauliflower may be cooked whole. Use only sufficient water with peas and beans to prevent burning. Drain vegetables, saving water from peas and beans. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, salt, milk and of the butted liquid. Place cauliflower in center of large buttered baking dish. Arrange peas and beans around it. Pour sauce over vegetables. Top with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (375 deg. F.) until crumbs are brown, about 25 minutes. Carrots, celery, zucchini, green beans or other vegetables may be used in combination, or left-over vegetables may be used. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

When the liquid from the vegetables is utilized in diluting the milk, all the goodness and minerals and vitamins which would ordinarily be discarded, are saved. Grated cheese may be stirred into the sauce to add new zest to this casserole of vegetables.

SPANISH LIMAS

1 onion chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
2 tbsp. butter
2 cups canned tomatoes
Salt, pepper, cayenne
1 lap. Worcestershire sauce
1 can lima beans
½ cup grated American cheese
Fry the onion and the green pepper in the butter; add the tomatoes and cook slowly 10 minutes. Add seasonings, and beans which have been well drained. Simmer slowly 20 minutes. Put beans and grated cheese in alternate layers in a casserole; bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg., 20 to 30 minutes. Two cups of cooked dried lima beans may be used if preferred.

Love and Marriage

Sense of Humor Invaluable

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If you're thinking about marriage and want to live "happily ever after," how is your sense of humor?

Far more important than your tulle veil, ivory bath gown (or striped gray trousers, if you happen to be the groom!) is your sense of humor. Things are bound to happen which are destructive of temper, and prompt what is known as "passing the buck" and doing a little howling out, though the partner of your joys and sorrows may not be in the least involved.

To repeat a formula which the American Eugenics Society bequeathed to those about to marry, some ten years ago:

"Marry a creatively intelligent good sport," and continuing in the same vein, the president of the society stated:

"The most valuable qualities parents should hand down to their children—qualities which would make the pattern of the coming man, are: Mental efficiency, creative intelligence, good sportsmanship—and a sense of humor."

The above is the stuff of which heroes and heroines are made. The stuff which enables men and women to carry on safely in a cockeyed world.

Not the least valuable of all wedding presents which a bride and groom can give to each other is a sense of humor. If they can only learn to laugh it off, they have found life's touchstone. Laughter dissolves calamities. It is the most valuable asset of family life.

The real ramps of history, like the real ramps of everyday life, have not been the greatest beauties but the women who could turn dull, commonplace happenings of everyday life into laughter.

Take for instance, Nell Gwynn, a street gamin, who sold oranges around the theaters and captured the heart of England's Charles II. Nell was no beauty, as her portraits reveal today. But she could make Charles laugh. And today one of the proudest of English ducal houses claims "witty Nell" the orange peddler, as its ancestor.

Sometimes I get letters from correspondents asking me how a sense of humor can be cultivated. I'm afraid it can't. It's just a gift of the gods, like naturally wavy hair or a peaches and cream complexion. But everyone can pretend to this gift by not taking immaterial things tragically. They can learn to "laugh it off."

Smart Set Functions

By BETTY ALDEN

YESTERDAY we pointed out that Boston gas were just one day behind the latest Paris and New York styles, but last evening we discovered that, thanks to Eleanor "Sister" Frothingham, they are days, perhaps months AHEAD of the fashions . . . Sister, outstanding glamour girl of the season's deb, attended the opening of the Theater Guild's new play clad in black velvet pajamas . . . They were made in a very glamorous style with crystal and silver beads trimming the neckline and waist, and full, flaring trouser legs . . .

The fashion designers took us to Turkey and Persia to find the motif for the new Harem skirts, but Sister had preceded them eastward to China where women wear silken trousers . . . The last we heard, Sister had ambitions to be a nightclub singer, but after seeing her friend, Diana Barrymore in "Outward Bound" she may develop a yen for a career behind the footlights . . .

Diana, as you know, is the daughter of John Barrymore, and was a prominent deb in New York social circles last winter . . . Piquant Laurette Taylor was the highlight of the performance which was enjoyed by such Boston social celebrities as Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, Mrs. Henry Endicott, Mr. and Mrs. William Dana Orcutt, Mrs. Albert Cameron Burrage, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Chalfoux, and William Sumner Appleton . . .

Colorful first night costumes included Mrs. Wilbur Higgins' gold trimmed amethyst crepe made with a train, Miss Hastings' pleated flame chiffon, Mrs. William Danforth's silver lame ensemble . . . She was with Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French . . .

At the Boston Opera House, Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Hinckley and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen added their share to the ovation for Raymond Massey in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" . . . Mary Elizabeth Sears, wearing her long blonde tresses in a peruke, a la George Washington, was also there . . .

Notes From a Society Editor's Cuff

It's an ill wind, etc. . . the war has given the many Boston friends of Miss Mary Dwight an opportunity to welcome her back into their midst . . . She has lived in Paris for some years but is now established on Beacon Hill, not far distant from the medical museum given to Harvard by her distinguished grandfather, John Collins Warren . . . Her father, the late Dr. Thomas Dwight, was a famous anatomist . . .

Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, Mrs. J. Frederick Brown and Miss Fannie Burr Seely will be hostesses at a cocktail and luncheon party at the Algonquin Club a week from Thursday . . . The guests will spend the remainder of the afternoon at bridge.

Dr. Eddy's Question Box

DO VEGETABLES HAVE STARCH AND PROTEIN?

ARE RAW EGGS GOOD FOR A CHILD?

By DR. WALTER H. EDDY

Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

Do vegetables contain starch and protein as well as minerals and vitamins?

The amounts of starch and protein vary with the type of vegetable.

Potatoes, for example, are high in starch, while the leafy vegetables and those like tomatoes are low in starch and protein. In the preparation of vegetables for use by diabetics it is customary to separate them into groups known as 5 per cent, 10 per cent and 15 per cent vegetables.

Such classification indicates the relative amount of starch or sugar present, and you can obtain lists giving such classification in any of the good textbooks on dietetics. The amount of protein and carbohy drate will also be found in such texts.

Cooking Eggs Aids Digestion
Are raw eggs better for the undernourished child than boiled eggs?

We formerly were taught that the raw egg was more digestible than the boiled variety. More recent studies, however, seem to indicate that our digestive juices can act more easily on an egg that has been partly coagulated before it is swallowed.

The hard-boiled egg is readily digested if it is sufficiently broken up by chewing or by mashing before it is swallowed. Obviously, if it is swallowed in large pieces, the digestive juices have a harder job to go at it, and take longer to accomplish the digestion.

The ordinary soft-boiled egg, therefore, seems probably the most easily handled by the digestive system.

Sugar and Cream Are Good Foods
Is the combination of sugar and cream harmful, as used in coffee or on cereals?

The combination of cream and sugar does not produce a harmful effect unless it increases your calorie intake above your needs, in which case you will increase in weight.

Nutritional authorities caution against excessive use of sugar on cereals for children as interfering with the development of an appetite for the cereal itself, but there is no physiological harm from the sugar and cream.

High Tea

DEAR MRS. HOFFMAN:

Will you please explain to me all the details of what is meant by a "High Tea"? The name is so charming, but I am indefinite about what it means, or how one plans such a party. HOSTESS.

"High Tea" is an English term, meaning a late afternoon or very early evening tea, served between the hours of five and seven. It is in reality a supper, and since the term "Buffet Supper" has come into such popularity it is usually called just that. By which ever name we call it, it is a charming way of entertaining informally.

The invitations to such a party are given informally by word of mouth, by telephone, by informal note, or by visiting card. The meal may be all ready when the guests arrive, or the hostess may plan as part of the entertainment that the guests help prepare the refreshments. All the details for such parties—chafing dishes, buffet dishes, and so forth . . . makes this easy and delightful nowadays.

The meal is served informally from the dining room table or from a large tea table, depending on the menu. Or often now the hostess uses small folding tables, of the bridge table type, covered with linen or novelty covers. The menu is always simple, and there is always a hot dish of some kind. Dessert may be ice cream and cake, or compote of fruit, or layer cake, or the always-welcome lemon or chocolate meringue pie. And always there is coffee, usually with the alternative of tea, and in summer, cool drinks too.

"HOW DO YOU explain your finger-prints on the car Cromwell was murdered in, Mr. Bonner?" Colonel Primrose asked.

I saw Clem's eyes sharpen, his jaw tighten a little harder, as if this was something he was not prepared for. "I guess that's for you to figure out," he said coolly.

Colonel Primrose picked up the wrought iron candle pick on the desk. "Have you seen this, Mr. Bonner?"

A sharp wedge of silence thrust itself suddenly into the room. Judy's body tensed as if she were steeling herself for a blow.

"I haven't anything to say," Clem said abruptly. Colonel Primrose turned the bloodstained candle holder over in his hands as if he was examining it for the first time. Clem's eyes were fixed on it, and beyond it on Judy's crumpled and stained riding shirt.

"This is what he was killed in," Colonel Primrose said casually. I suppose nobody but Sergeant Buck and myself would have known that he was as tense and aware as a pointer motionless in the field. "It was found in Mrs. Bonner's clothes hamper in her bathroom wrapped in this shirt of hers."

He picked the shirt up, indifferently, and wrapped the candle holder again.

The blood surged darkly into Clem's face. He started to speak, and checked himself. Judy turned in her chair so that she didn't have to look at him. I had the feeling, as her body relaxed that the small white flame of . . . something. I don't know what . . . had died again in her heart just then.

Colonel Primrose put the shirt-wrapped weapon back on the desk. "Doesn't get us very far, does it?" he said placidly, and got up. "Well, I think Mrs. Bonner ought to get some rest."

He looked at Bill Hogan. Hogan pushed back his chair. "We . . . don't like to keep a lady in the cells downstairs, Mr. Bonner," he said gruffly. "It's up to you. If you'd go back to your hotel and stay there, all right. But you'll understand you're . . . incommunicado."

He looked at Clem, and at Mr. Martin. "She's in your custody, Martin. You can take her back." Judy's face under its sun tan was the color of old ivory. "Thank you, Mr. Hogan," she said, her low voice like the surface of rubbed velvet.

Clem Bonner got up, his eyes fixed on her for the first time, dumb and aching. I thought for a moment that he couldn't help crossing the room to her and crushing her in his arms, once and forever. But maybe I was mistaken. "I won't try to see her, if that's what you mean." He spoke as brusquely that her body stiffened involuntarily.

She hesitated as she passed me. "Are you coming, Grace?"

A Million Dollars to Relieve Piles

It is estimated that over a million dollars annually is spent for various remedies for relieving piles. Yet any druggist will tell you that soothing, cooling, astringent Peterson's Ointment will allay pile torture in a few minutes. 35c a box. 60c in tube with applicator. Peterson's Ointment stops itching promptly, brings joyful relief. Money back if not delighted.

"I'd like Mrs. Latham to stay a minute," Colonel Primrose said. "You, too, Mr. Bonner."

Judy went quickly out the door. I think I felt a more poignant ache for her just then, going out, chin up, back straight, her gray eyes almost blinded with unshed tears. I can't I've felt since the years I watched my two tiny boys meet their small comrades with the appallingly sturdy fortitude of childhood. A broken train of cars teaches people to take a broken train of dreams, I suppose.

"TOO STAGGERING"

Their steps, hers quick and light, Mr. Martin's slow and ponderous, died away in the night. Hogan nodded to Colonel Primrose and went out. Colonel Primrose shifted his position on the edge of the desk.

"I want to say something to both of you," he said calmly. "You might come a little closer, Mrs. Latham.—The amount of evidence that's piling up against Mrs. Bonner is pretty staggering. But—and it's against the rules of police procedure for me to tell you this—it's so staggering that both Hogan and the chief of police, as well as myself, have about come to the conclusion that it's too staggering."

He looked at us for a moment, his face very grave.

"On the other hand, the district attorney, who's somewhat of a clown, and hasn't been in office very long, doesn't see that. And it's highly probable, the way things stand at present, that he could make a local jury not see it. Furthermore, he has political ambitions, and a case like this could make a good springboard."

Clem Bonner's face was expressionless.

"However, I . . . don't believe she killed him. In fact, since ninety-three this evening I've been pretty certain she didn't."

He looked at me with a polite but sardonic smile, and I stared at him open-mouthed, trying desperately to think what could have happened at nine-thirty. It would have been just about the time I was trying to call Clem in New York from the Washoe bar.

He went on slowly.

"I don't think she killed Cromwell. There has to be a motive for doing things like that, and a powerful one. Wislack—the District Attorney—this jealousy is enough, in this case. Perhaps. If it is, it won't be Mrs. Bonner we're looking for. She didn't care enough about the fellow to kill him."

He looked down at Clem Bonner for an instant.

"This brings up two possibilities, one of which is . . . unpleasant. Someone else killed Dexter Cromwell. I don't know if that so far we are utterly in the dark about; and he deliberately put the murder off on Mrs. Bonner, perhaps because, in some way, it was just the simplest thing to do . . . or, more probably, because he had a very devilish determination that Judy Bonner was to suffer for it."

He stood up, his voice harder and more clipped than I'd ever heard it. "There are human emotions that turn into something pretty terrible, when they go sour. Murder is healthy, compared to this. The torture that whoever did this is putting Mrs. Bonner through is . . . not healthy."

Clem Bonner got up abruptly and paced back and forth between the desk and the door.

Colonel Primrose watched him silently for a moment. "The point being," he went on coolly, "that you two have got to help me here. There are questions that must be answered, and quickly.—Assuming that Mrs. Bonner did not herself take that candle pick out of her room and put it back, stained with Cromwell's blood, in her clothes hamper, there is no problem about that was done."

"Anybody could have got in her room quite easily by means of the corridor window and the fire escape. But who? And was Mrs. Bonner out at the race track with Cromwell when he was killed? And above all . . . why was he killed?"

BONNER TALKS

I looked at him stupidly, not understanding . . . for the only thing we really knew, Col. Primrose and I, was that whatever else Judy Bonner had done or had not done, she had been there in the car when he had died. Those golden hairs clutched in his hand were silent and damning testimony to that.

He went calmly on. "And what about Mr. Bonner's fingerprints on the door of the car? Was he at the race track too?"

Clem Bonner, still pacing back and forth, halted abruptly.

"No," he said. "He wasn't. And Judy wasn't either."

Col. Primrose nodded politely. "Sure of that, Bonner?"

"Quite."

"You were with her after you saw Cromwell?"

My heart sank as Clem flushed darkly again.

Col. Primrose shifted his weight on the desk. "Why did you come out here, by the way?"

"I've told you."

"You've told me part."

Clem turned angrily, or so I thought at first. I saw then that it wasn't anger as much as it was pain and resentment, struggling with new bitterness, and new doubt. He looked at Colonel Primrose for a long instant, coolly, steadily appraising, before he answered.

"All right. Here's the rest of it. When my wife decided to come out here (I told her I'd give her power of attorney so she could get her divorce, uncontested and decently, and marry Cromwell—if she wanted to, and that's what she did want—just as long as he didn't come out here with her. I told her that, and I told him too. I found out, three days ago, that he did come out with her . . . and then I came out to break his neck. That's why I came out."

I started violently at a deep voice that spoke suddenly from the door behind me: "Is this a confession, Bonner?"

I turned in my chair and stared aghast at the little man standing there behind me. He wore a bright brown suit and he had a bald narrow domelike head and glittering black eyes as sharp and beady as shoe buttons, and a large rigid mouth in a thin saffron-colored face.

"Is this a confession?" he repeated harshly.

"This is Mr. Wislack," Colonel Primrose said suavely, "The District Attorney.—Mrs. Latham, and Mr. Bonner."

The District Attorney's little beady eyes were boring into Clem's face. And Clem, startled for the moment, stared angrily at him. "You can take it for one, if you like," he said curtly.

"Since your fingerprints are all over the door of the death car . . . Wislack began. He hesitated, a shadow of calculated indecision on his shrewd little face as he darted a glance at Colonel Primrose. "Come in here," he said abruptly. "I want to talk with you."

He held the door open. Clem gave me a quick sardonic grin and strode through.

I picked up my bag. Colonel Primrose was standing by the door leading to the corridor.

"I would never have believed," I said bitterly, "that you could have let anybody down like that."

I was terribly angry at his doing that to Clem, and hurt, too, I suppose.

He stared at me for a moment, puzzled, and then incredulous. Then he blocked the door, his hand on the knob, an expression of hurt bitterness gathering on his own face.

"You're at liberty to believe anything you choose, my dear," he said. "I'm only trying to save your niece. And if I do, it will be in spite of a large and varied multitude of perfectly demented things that you've done, Mrs. Latham . . . and if I fail, it will be because I can't untie the noose you've already tied around her neck."

I stared at him, blank-faced and utterly speechless.

"And inasmuch as I'm only doing this for you—"

"We don't like to keep a woman in the cells downstairs," the Colonel tells Judy.

He stopped abruptly. "Good night."

I hurried out and through the still brilliantly lighted empty streets . . . hurt, and bewildered, and unhappy, and more afraid, in spite of what he'd said before, than I'd ever been in my life.

Whitley and Kaye Gorman were at the hotel desk playing blackjack with the night clerk. They looked up as I came in, and Kaye came over to where I was standing by the elevator.

"Is it true Clem's back?" she asked.

I nodded.

"Where is he?"

"In jail, I imagine," I said. "He seemed to be heading that way."

"Are you being funny, Mrs. Latham?"

Her voice was hard, and irritated.

"I wish I could be," I said shortly. "Good night."

I don't know how late I should have slept the next morning if I hadn't been waked by something touching me. I opened my eyes to see Judy sitting cross-legged on the foot of my bed.

Her wide-set gray eyes met mine gravely. "What happened to Clem?"

JUDY'S STORY

"I don't know. He told Colonel Primrose he came out to break Dex's neck, and the district attorney overheard him."

She twisted her handkerchief into a tight string and let it unroll. "Judy," I said. "I don't want to pry into your affairs, but I would like to know why you allowed Dex Cromwell to come out here with you, when you'd agreed not to? It doesn't sound like you, some way."

The color rose slowly in her cheeks.

"He didn't come with me. I didn't know he was coming. He was here when I got here—he drove out before I left, and met me at the train."

Her long gold-tipped lashes brushing her cheeks covered her darkening downcast eyes.

"Did Judy's husband kill Dex Cromwell? Don't miss tomorrow's thrilling chapter."

THE SAGA OF 'SKY RAIDER' RICKENBACKER

German Aces Feared Daring of War Bird

has been a cool calculation of chances.

"I always demand an even break and try to eliminate every possible element of danger before making a venture. In that way I am not reckless, for a reckless man does not stop to consider the odds."

Five years after his first contest on the speed tracks as a driver Rick dove a Blitzen Benz on the sands at Daytona Beach, Fla., at 134 miles an hour, then the world record.

In April, 1917, when the United States entered the World War, he was in England, the boy racing cars which had been put away by their English owners because the war was a bigger and a sterner game.

Hustling back to America, the racer endeavored to obtain permission to organize a flying unit, with American race drivers as pilots. This failing, he enlisted in the Army and was assigned as chauffeur for General Pershing when the American Expeditionary Force started overseas.

Well, the boys at Chaumont didn't see much of the actual racing, and the boys along far behind the lines proved too tame for Rickenbacker, used as he was to being up there in the thick of hard, driving action.

However, there was no better place to wangle a transfer than at G. H. Q., and although Black Jack Pershing disliked losing this personable, smiling skilled chauffeur, Rick was able to maneuver a transfer to aviation.

After only 12 lessons at flying school in Tours, he soared.

"I guess I did learn pretty fast," said Rickenbacker, on this phase of his experience. "Long practice in driving a racing car at 100 miles an hour or so gives first-class training in control and in judging distances at high speed. It helps tremendously in getting motor sense, which is rather the feel of your engine than the sound of it, a thing you get through your bones and nerves instead of your ears."

"All this is a part of the physical equipment of handling an airplane. The proof of it is that after five and a half hours' dust' with an instructor they let me solo."

"But because I was a good mechanic they sent me to Issoudun to be engineer officer. Being engineer officer I never had any regular advanced flying training according to rule. I took up a ship whenever I could and learned the way."

"I remember when I thought it was time to try a wrille or twirlpin. I knew what I was supposed to do. I knew you put the stick over and crossed the controls, but I'd never seen anybody do it in a cockpit."

"I went up about 12,000 feet, got off some dust, then the field and flew around there for every bit of 30 minutes, trying to get up my nerve to try the wrille or too scared to begin."

"A 'What's the matter with you? You've got to do this.' And I threw the stick. She went into the spin all right, but I had her back to neutral after just one whirl, and I tell you I was glad when she righted."

"Next day I went up and it took 20 minutes to make up my mind to try again. It was only on the third day that I went at the job with any confidence and let her do some real spinning."

"The next thing was to get away from Issoudun. I was not an instructor, but even an engineer officer in France could not afford to be too good. I don't think I was. Still, when I asked to go to the front, the C. O. said I couldn't be spared."

"So I conspired with the medical officer. He doesn't know it yet, but I did. I got myself sent to the hospital for two weeks and at the end of that time I went to the C. O. and told him that it had been proved I wasn't indispensable — because the other fellow had done the job better than I had.

"He couldn't deny it, and he let me go. That gave me my chance to try my luck as a fighting pilot and it was not long before I was at the front at last."

On May 2, 1918, in company with Capt. James Norman Hall, fellow pilot in the 94th Aero Squadron, Rickenbacker shot down his first German plane. Jimmy Hall, of Colfax, Iowa, had been with Lord Kitchener's first hundred thousand Britishers at the front, had been invalided home, had written "Kitchener's Mob," then had flown for the French and the Americans and would survive to write, with Pilot Charles B. Nordhoff, the voluminous history of the Lafayette Corps, as well as "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Men Against the Sea," "Pitcairn Island," "The Hurricane" and other popular works.

Early in his experience as a pursuit pilot, Eddie Rickenbacker learned that the experienced pilot and the one most likely to survive was he who stripped the heroics from his assignments.

"I have had extraordinary good luck," he said at one time, "but fighting in the air is not a sport. It is scientific murder. The men who have learned their trade will go at it in that manner, and as long as they do go at it that way they have an excellent chance to survive."

"The experienced fighting pilot does not take unnecessary risks. His business is to shoot down enemy planes, not to get shot down."

"It is not the old hand and the expert flyer and air fighter who gets another of the same sort. Both are wise and shy birds. You'll see a couple of that kind meet now and then over the lines and watch them circling experimentally around each other."

"The next thing you know, each has sized up his antagonist as just as good or better than himself and both have sheered off and are flying away to look for a more promising victim. Each is hunting for an enemy who can be pounced upon suddenly and unawares, and a getaway made before his comrades are on the victim's tail."

ONE approved method of attack utilized by the World War sky raiders was to dive out of the sun at the rearmost plane of a formation, shoot him down if the attacker had luck, then circle or spiral upward and dive again at the next tail-ender.

Rick tried that trick once but he had shut off his pressure and forgotten about it, and when, after crashing his first Hun, Rick tried to regain altitude the Spad refused to climb.

He had to go into a roll, which got him gravely into action, but by that time the Boche were all coming at him like hornets with their guns spitting. There was nothing left to do but dive with full power, which, in the case of a Spad, meant going down at the rate of about 300 miles an hour.

It was fortunate for the American that he was high, because he was compelled to shriek down 8000 feet that way, with half a dozen Boche after him and lead splitting the air on all sides. But he finally pulled out of the pique and scuttled away for home.

On the morning of October 2, 1918, Rickenbacker and Reed Chambers, of the 94th were on patrol between St. Mary-Meuse and Romagne and were nearing the eastern turning point when they discovered a two-seater Hanover machine trying to steal across the line behind them.

Low and ready across the trenches was the biplane Boche and in order to tempt the Germans a little farther inside the

ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS AIM AT PLANES
Few Aviators Were Brought Down This Way

boundaries, Rickenbacker and Reed made no sign of noticing the Hanover.

Nicely timing his thrust until it was certain he could cut off the German machine even if the Boche observed him as he turned, Rickenbacker suddenly flipped over and dived for the point where he estimated the meeting must take place. But to his surprise the two-seater continued ahead into the allied territory as if Rick had not existed.

"A fine thing," thought Rick, "a little let down over this disdain. I'm supposed to be dangerous, aren't I?"

He altered his course, but the victory appeared so easy that he feared some deep-devised scheme lay behind all this. The observer was certainly alive, because he was standing up beside his one gun mounted on a tournelle, or swivel, but the gun was not even pointing in Rick's direction.

Rick had the observer in the gun-sights at 100 yards but he continued on until half that distance had been covered, when he pulled both triggers. As if tired, the observer sagged limply over the side of the cockpit and lay there as Rick shot by above the Hanover, which had begun to bank over for the run home.

In a quick reversal, a fast climb, a flop-over and a return course almost on the back-track, Rickenbacker headed off the Boche biplane as the German pilot's bullets ripped through the swift Spad. Then Rick pulled a quick virage and again was on the German's tail, had the pilot in his gun-sights—and at this critical moment both guns jammed.

FURIOUS over this piece of bad luck, Rick refrained from giving himself away by using the jump-hammer on the guns. The German pilot did not know the American was stung—yet. So Rick again garled around the biplane machine and headed the enemy end.

Reed Chambers, leading a small patrol, had come up by them, firing as he approached, and his first burst finished off the Boche. In a gradual glide, the big Hanover headed for the ground. Down, down, down, the Americans watched the pilotless plane coast and saw it, amazingly, make almost a perfect landing among the shell holes covering the ground just north of Montfaucon, two miles within the allied lines.

Meanwhile Rick and his little hammer were clearing the gun jams, and in this business he had become so occupied that he was within 50 feet of a cloud formation when he looked up and saw a whole flock of German Fokkers sifting through the thin puffs of white.

"His heart in his mouth," Rick was over on his wing the next instant, executing a double quick spin to get out of their range, but the Germans were nearly as quick and eight of them were plugging down and firing as they dove.

Past him tracer bullets sped, but he could not bear them the roar of the motor. Not quite fast enough this falling away by spinning, Rick stopped the spin and dove, with motor full on, the ravenous Fokkers still pursuing.

So long, good old Columbia, Ohio! So long Indianapolis and the rear of those other motors! So long, Black Jack at G. H. Q.; so long, Reed Chambers and Doug Campbell and Jimmy Weisner and Ham Coolidge! It was fun while it lasted!

But where are the tracer bullets? With the wind nearly tearing his head from his column, Rick snapped a glance upward. High uptairs, the Fokkers were very busy now with other matters. Reed Chambers' Spads had broken up the pursuit.

It's a job to pull out of a wrille and keep your wings on. Rick, and now as a hornet, pushed his motor and climbed. The Spads were in hot pursuit of the fleeing Fokkers, with the latter trying to make the clouds before the faster-climbing American ships.

"Climbing for all I was worth," Rick duly reported after the fight, "I arrived at the northern edge of the cloudbank at the same time Reed reached there. We had made one or two circles just beneath the billowy mass of white when out burst the leader of the Huns over our heads, and one by one his formation followed him raggedly."

"In a trice, Reed and I were under the last Fokker's tail. Reed took the left and I took the right, and almost the same second we began firing. I had let go 200 rounds when I saw my man falling, and again at almost the same instant Reed ceased firing and his man, too, dropped out of line and began his last landing."

"The rest of the Boche formation fled straight on into their own lines and we were unable to overtake them. As we turned back, we saw our two victims crash almost simultaneously within a mile back of our lines."

Three victories in less than an hour for Eddie Rickenbacker and Reed Chambers of the Boche feared "Hat-in-a-Ring" American 94th—one for the Americans and one for the two pilots.

But there was one pilot that Rick didn't get, and whose identity he has been all trying to learn for 21 years.

AS a matter of fact, Rick is glad now he didn't get him, this German he will call "Heine"

16," because he flew Fokker No. 16 in his squadron.

"I'd like to meet him and buy him an ice cream soda," said Rickenbacker right after fighting him from half to three-quarters of an hour the first three days. Then we had a long session."

"The first day I tackled him, but he could keep above me for he had a greater wing spread. Finally he went back."

"Next morning he came again and I went after him. I had a new machine, this one with three guns, while the day before, I had only two and after half an hour each of those guns was jammed. On this second morning my oil ran low and the motor stalled, so I had to leave him."

"On the third morning I found him again, 2000 feet in the air, and we maneuvered, around shooting at each other, but we seemed to be like a couple of skillful boxers for we both kept out of danger."

"On the fourth day I met him again and this time I realized that his game was to secure photographs. It was amusing, for I kept recording him around and around all the time, trying to keep directly under him to prevent any pictures being made."

"The surprising part of it was that he never fired a shot at me that day. I followed him back to Germany, but when I found I was some 20 miles inside their lines I thought it was time to get home."

"This last encounter with my daily visitor kept me in the air three and a half hours. They thought at the field that I was surely gone."

In the new war in Europe, however, Rick's "Heine 16" would be unable to hang around so long in one stretch. Germany's present Messerschmidt planes are harder to maneuver and carry a great deal less gas than the Curtiss ships being used by the French pursuit groups. These correspond, broadly, to the Spads and the Spads (or the Niepauls) of the last war as opponents.

Thus, where the Americans used French planes in the last war, the French are using American machines in this. As for H. G. Fokker, the Hollander whose airplane designs were spurned by the United States and who went to Germany and turned out the World War's most formidable fighting ship, is now an American, forgiving and forgiven. And such are life's little pleasures—Eddie Rickenbacker, 11 years after the war, became president of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation—Rick, who had so many battles in the air with Fokkers.

TWO years later, at the Cleveland air races, Rick shook hands with a short and pudgy Teuton who looked like Santa Claus might without his whiskers.

For the first time, Rickenbacker had been introduced formally to Major Ernst Udet, one of the old Richthofen Circus, with whom Eddie had posited on several occasions at Chateau Thierry, Soissons and St. Mihiel.

"I am glad to meet my old enemy, who has now become my friend," said Major Udet in soft, clipped English.

Aces—no back to back, but face to face.

But today there is another war. The meeting was two years before Adolf Hitler became dictator in Nazi Germany. Today Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Hitler's "Trigger Man" and successor of Baron von Hindenburg in command of the Flying Circus, has revived the circus. Major Udet, now a general, is Goering's right-hand man in German aviation.

It might be wondered what Old Rick is thinking!

(He was a sick kid—too sick to be accepted as a soldier. So he wormed his way into aviation through the back door and became, at his mysterious death, France's leading ace. Tomorrow—the story of gallant Georges Guynemer.)

Ten Years Since
"Black Thursday"

Financial Editor

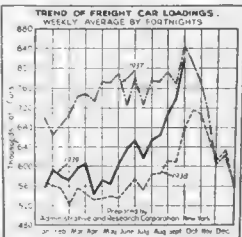

Today is the Tin anniversary of "Black Thursday" . . . That horrible day 10 years ago when the towering structure reared by five years of uninterrupted speculation toppled into the valley of depression . . . And in its awesome roar the golden day-dreams of traders vanished forever . . .

TIME . . . Has eased the heart-break . . . And time has shown the folly of paper profits . . . But more important time has reared a rampart to shield the unwary and unthinking . . . Banking laws have been overhauled, manipulation outlawed and securities exchanges placed under Federal supervision . . . Probably all are far from perfect . . . But they represent a sincere effort to eliminate abuses and guard against future excesses . . . And such aims circumscribe the most partisan critics . . .

LEGISLATION . . . Will never save the fool from destined fate . . . But it will always offer courageous federal servants with a mighty weapon to combat unthinking speculation . . . And this is important in mulling over the significance of "Black Thursday" . . . For it marked a mid-point between two wars . . . Many economists say it was the logical heritage of man's heedless destruction in 1914-18 . . . And as armies are massing again far-sighted men are concerned with the aftermath of battles . . .

MARKET ACTION . . . Continues to reflect uncertainties . . . Principally of industry to hold current high levels for a sufficient time to warrant price levels comparable to those of 1937 . . . The war is on furlough . . . And it is our guess domestic affairs can get on nicely without it . . . And if a sudden peace does not break the stalemate it will become obvious . . . In the meantime traders require selling protection . . . Which if in the form of actual stop-loss orders might take mental form under the laws of last week . . .

CARLOADINGS . . . Deserve all the praise currently being heaped on them . . . The cheer of John J. Pelley following his White House visit of yesterday is based on fact . . . The chart reveals the situation . . . Instead of recording weekly figures a fortnightly average is used . . . Which smooths out what would be an otherwise erratic trend line . . . When the latest figures are compiled the peak of 1937 will be exceeded . . . The big difference between now and then is the angle of improvement . . . A fast upturn contrasts with slow improvement . . . And therein lies the laggardly answer of stock prices . . .

NOTEBOOK . . . The truck share has behaved quite well in recent sessions . . . But without a generally buoyant market they are not going to get the fullest measure of gain out of the good foreign order news . . . Armour preferred is well liked by some statisticians . . . In the event peace happens buying sentiment will shift speedily . . . With foods, and chain store units getting a major share of attention along with utilities . . . All are backed by good earnings reports and only war and inflation gossip is holding them back . . .

BUSINESS . . . Observers are talking about a letdown in the first quarter of 1940 . . . War or no war . . . Whose effect they see limited to influencing the degree of correction . . . Which is normal to expect . . . Then a fresh advance to new highs is looked for . . . With construction leading the way . . . They argue the time element is right for it and internal trends will place it regardless of what takes place elsewhere . . . And it also is interesting that they look for air-conditioning to blossom out as the new industry leader . . .

Stock Prices Jog Over Mixed Trail

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (AP)—The stock market jogged over a moderately irregular trail today and, despite quiet strength here and there, recent leaders failed to get anywhere in particular.

With activity sluggish throughout, fractional price changes either way predominated near mid-day.

In early dealings modest gains were posted for U. S. Gypsum, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, American

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (INS)—
Noon Stock Exchange prices:
Douglas 84½, up 1½; Bethlehem Steel 91½, up ½; U. S. Steel 76½, up ½; Chrysler 90½, unchanged; General Motors 34½, off ¼; U. S. Gypsum 84, up 2½; Johns-Manville 81½, up 1½; Westinghouse Electric 18½, off ½; Allied Chemical 163½, unchanged; Loews 33½, up ½; Anaconda 33½, up ½; J. I. Case 32½, off 1.

Smelting, American Telephone, Western Union, North American, Yellow Truck and Standard Oil of N. J.

Backward were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Santa Fe, Westinghouse, Sperry, Glenn Martin, Montgomery Ward, Kenecott, Goodyear, Caterpillar Tractor and Texas Corp.

European news was no more warlike than in the past week or so and, brokers said, seemed to be a minor influence marketwide.

Announcement Nazi Foreign Secretary Von Ribbentrop would make an important speech later in the day was also seen as a trading restraint.

Inability of the market to cash in on the continued flow of cheerful earnings reports and extra dividends tended to confuse the speculative picture.

Bonds were selectively higher and commodities mixed. Foreign securities markets did little either way.

The financial district studied the figures of Federal Reserve Member banks in 101 cities for the week ended Wednesday which disclosed a reduction of $2,900,000 in loans to commerce, industry and agriculture following eight consecutive weekly increases during which the aggregate expanded $376,000,000.

For the six week debits to individual accounts were 11 per cent above the previous week's total, but 13 per cent below the corresponding period last year. The latest week included only five business days in most centers.

Noted was the estimate of the bureau of agricultural economics placing September cash income from farm marketing and government payments at $347,000,000 compared with $643,000,000 in the previous month and $743,000,000 in September, 1938.

At the same time, the bureau's index of income of industrial workers was reported at 83 for August, an advance of three points from the previous month and the highest level since January, last year.

GOLDEN PROBLEM TROUBLING 'DEAL'

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
Special to Boston Evening American
WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—The New Deal has a huge gold bear by the tail and doesn't know how to let go.

HUGH E. BRADSHAW
Editor-Lecturer

Bradshaw To Lecture At Harvard

In order to assist the constantly increasing number of people who find it either a family duty or business necessity to understand investment security trends the State Department of Education is offering a University Extension course on Investing in Stocks and Bonds.

Hugh E. Bradshaw, financial editor of the Boston Record-American will conduct the course which will meet Wednesday evenings, starting Oct. 25 at 8 p. m. in Sever Hall, Harvard.

During the series of eight lectures comprising the course particular attention will be given the long term factors controlling stock and bond prices. Feature of each lecture will be a question period, supplying those who attend with a chance to submit personal problems as well as matters pertaining to the subjects under discussion.

Compromise May End Chrysler Strike

DETROIT, Oct. 24 (AP)—A new compromise plan for establishing production rates was under consideration by officials of Chrysler Corporation today, and union leaders expressed hope that it might be the solution to the dispute which has made more than 57,000 workers idle.

The plan, presented by the CIO United Automobile Workers, was described by Regional Director Richard T. Frankenstein as "a reversion from our position, based on our interest in securing industrial peace."

For the present it is hibernating in a million-dollar hole in the ground out in Kentucky, but it is beginning to stir in its sleep. Its growls are already growing terrifying.

Mr. Henry F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of State, referred to it in his address earlier this month before the National Foreign Trade convention as a "bombshell" that might explode in a frenzy of inflation.

Bombshell or bear, it is all the same—the thing is dangerous.

When Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, said in the House the other day that he had never had it clear in his mind why that stock of gold is stored at Fort Knox, and a stock of silver at West Point, he had nothing on the New Dealers themselves. They don't understand it either.

The Administration has followed the gold policies of Prof. Warren to the end of the rainbow.

To buy this gold, at an arbitrary price almost double the world price, the government has had to issue bonds to get the money, and the annual interest today on all the outstanding national indebtedness has passed the $1,000,000,000 mark, and is breaking the hearts and the backs of the American people in taxes.

So much for this folly. Every eminent economist knew it was folly when it was adopted.

Japan has sold us about $600,000,000 worth of gold during the last three years, at our own cockeyed price of $35 an ounce, as compared with a world price of $20.67. Of this $240,000,000 has been a premium to Japan.

Our ambassador at Tokio, Mr. Joseph C. Grew, gets up before the American-Japan society, and bluntly states what is undeniably true, that the American people are fed up on Japan's war in China, with its deliberate encroachment on American rights as guaranteed by treaty.

U. S. Speeds Trade Drive

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP)—The administration put new steam today into its drive to capture Latin American trade from war-hindered European businessmen by co-ordinating into one campaign the rival efforts of a score of federal agencies.

Dudley P. K. Wood, special Latin American trade adviser at the Commerce department, disclosed that representatives of department stores throughout the nation would be invited here about Nov. 1 to tell Latin American commercial attaches how to sell more goods in the United States.

The idea, Wood explained, is to give the Latin American countries more money to buy United States goods by increasing purchases of their goods which do not compete directly with products made here.

Wins Cash for Tip In Slaying Probe

The alleged confession to the "48-cent murder" of a Stoughton man by a 17-year-old New Bedford youth—who had eloped with a Maine high school girl—was first reported to the City Editor at Liberty 4000 by a Stoughton man. He wins the award of $10 in the weekly Tipster Contest of the Boston Record, Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Million in Gems Put on Display

Rare gems worth more than $1,000,000 went on display today at the Museum of Natural History in the second annual exhibit of the Boston registered jewelers of the American Gem Society and the Boston Society of Natural History.

The exhibit will be open from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily through Friday.

Also the 42-carat Brazilian diamond which Emperor Maximilian of Mexico carried in a chamois bag around his neck when shot by a firing squad in Queretaro, Mexico, in 1867.

Boston registered jewelers represented in the exhibition are Hodgson, Kennard & Co., Thomas Long, Co., Shreve, Crump & Low, Co., Smith Patterson Co., and A. Stowell Co.

We've Got Our Own War

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Congress is hotter than a fire-eater's tonils these days. The argument seems to be: "How can we keep from keeping out of the war?"

It is pretty bad but might be worse. Wait until they motorize the swivel chairs.

One Senator suggested a closure on words and a moratorium on rebuttals. He finally voted against himself, just to make it unanimous.

Says Man Can Now Use Power of 1000 Minds

A strange man in Los Angeles known as "The Voice of Two Worlds," reveals the story of a remarkable system that often leads to almost unbelievable improvement in power of mind, achievement of brilliant business and professional success and new happiness. Many report improvement in health. Others tell of increased bodily strength, magnetic personality, courage and poise.

The man, a well-known explorer and geographer, tells how he found these strange methods in far off and mysterious Tibet, often called the land of miracles by the few travelers permitted to visit it. He discloses how he learned rare wisdom and long hidden practices, closely guarded for three thousand years by the sages, which enabled many to perform amazing feats. He maintains that these immense powers are latent in all of us, and that methods for using them are now simplified so they can be used by almost any person with ordinary intelligence.

He maintains that man, instead of being limited by a one-man-power-mind, has within him the mind power of a thousand men or more as well as the energy power of the universe which he has used in his daily affairs.

It was news to a Hyde Park man when he learned of the shooting of a Hyde Park wife by her husband, and of her escape into the woods. He was FIRST to call the City Editor at Liberty 4000 and wins $3 for his timely tip.

The tragedy of the finding of the woman's body in the woods of Winchester following a brush fire was first reported by a Winchester man, who is awarded $2. Similar awards go to a Mattapan man who reported a $2000 holdup in Roxbury and to a fisherman who reported the finding of a plane at sea by another traveler.

A New Bedford man telephoned to the City Editor of a fatal automobile accident and wins $1. A Back Bay girl is also awarded $1 for her first report of feeling the tremors of the earthquake which shook New England last week.

A fire in the Orrington Hotel in Manchester, N. H., in which a score of guests were driven out, was first reported by a Manchester woman, who is awarded $1 for her tip.

To a Somerville man goes $1 for his first report of the accidental death beneath an El train of Timothy Sullivan, the sports publicity man well known to all Boston newspaper men.

Awards of $1 each also go to a Dorchester man who reported a serious fire in Rockland, and to a South Boston man who was first with the report of a child victim of a hit-and-run driver who was a patient at Carney Hospital.

If you see or hear anything which seems worthy to you call the City Editor at Liberty 4000 and be FIRST with the news. Then watch this column for the weekly awards.

POLICE DANCE TONIGHT

Concord Police Relief Association will hold its biennial concert and ball in Concord State Armory tonight, with dancing from 9 to 1. Chairman of Selectman Hubert M. Wardwell will lead the grand march with Mrs. Marshall J. Withnell, wife of Sergt. Withnell, association president.

He states that this sleeping giant of mind power, when awakened, can make him capable of surprising accomplishment, from the prolonging of youth, to success in many fields.

The author states the time has come for this long hidden system to be disclosed to the Western world, and offers to send his amazing 9000 word treatise—which reveals many startling results—to sincere readers of this paper, free of cost or obligation. For your free copy, address the Institute of Mental-Physics, 213 South Hobart Blvd., Dept. B-137, Los Angeles, Calif. Readers are urged to write promptly, as only a limited number of the free treatises have been printed.

Convict Killed Playing Prison Football Game

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24 (AP)—A convict who had served two years of a 25-to-50-year sentence for robbery, died today of internal injuries received in the first prison football game of the season.

A tackle swept Frank Pianso, 24, off his feet as he carried the ball around end. Pianso finished the game, then went to the prison infirmary.

Pianso had hoped for a parole in eight more years. Other prisoners said this was one reason he played football at every opportunity. It helped him build a good conduct record.

"HOW SHOULD I train so that I can win the heavyweight class in the Hearst All-America boxing tournament?"

The young hopeful enclosed this question with his entry. I immediately called upon the service of expert opinion in the person of Harry Kelley, who has conditioned Jack Sharkey, Jim Maloney, Sammy Fuller, Dick Finnegan, Jock Malone and other famous fighting men.

"A heavyweight needs plenty of work if he is to get into good condition," replied Kelley. "I would advise amateur heavyweights to do three miles of road work each morning. They should dress in rough clothes, and do their running through one of the park systems.

"When Sharkey was champion, he used to run around the Chestnut Hill Reservoir, and the fact it was raining, cold or even snowing didn't interfere with his program. He went out on the road just the same.

"Why road work? It builds up the wind of a boxer, gives him endurance, and also helps to take off superfluous flesh.

"After road work, a boxer should take a shower, and dry himself off with a towel. A rubdown is not advisable.

"After a brief rest, the heavyweight may have breakfast. Eggs, a strip of bacon and dry toast are best. No coffee. Coffee tends to slow a boxer down. In the case of bantamweights and featherweights, a glass of milk may be added to the breakfast menu. Heavyweights can get along without milk."

Boxing Important Part of Training Drill

KELLEY STATED that boxers in training should not eat any lunch.

"The gym training should be done in the early part of the afternoon, and therefore lunch is out," went on Kelley. "Boxing is one of the most important parts of the training.

"A heavyweight should limber up by doing a round or so of shadow boxing. Then he should punch the small bag for two or three rounds.

"Bag punching strengthens the arms, and helps eliminate the tendency so many young boxers have of dropping their guard and leaving an opening for a knockout.

"Following the bag punching, the boxer should be ready to step into the ring against two or three first class sparring partners. There should be five rounds of boxing for amateurs. Good sparring partners will sharpen up a boxer's punch, and improve his timing.

"There should also be a round of punching at the big bag. This should be done chiefly to study different types of punches.

"Later there should be some floor exercises to limber up all of the muscles of the body. Then for a shower and a brisk rub-down.

"When the day's training is over, there should be 15 minutes of 'kuk' practice in which the manager and trainer discuss boxing methods with an athlete. It is well to point out mistakes made during the boxing drill so that they may be corrected."

Confidence and Courage Help Win

KELLEY STATED that confidence and courage help win many bouts.

"Champions have the ability to keep going despite the fact they are tired and maybe a bit shaken up by punches," said Harry. "Always remember that the other fellow is probably every bit as tired as you are.

"Boxers should have their principal meal of the day between 5 p. m. and 6 p. m. It should consist of meat, steak preferred, baked potato, two vegetables, salad, dry toast and tea or milk. Desserts, of course, are barred.

"There should not be any eating late at night. A boxer in training should be in bed by 10 o'clock.

"When I worked with Johnny Wilson, we had our camp at Bedford, and all lights were usually out at 9 p. m. Sleep is essential in order for a boxer to build up vitality.

"When you see boxers around night clubs, you can be sure that it will not be long before some of them will be coasting them out. There are a few exceptions like Maxie Rosenbloom, but no boxer has the right to say he will prove an exception to the rules."

GENE TUNNEY proved how one could become a champion by proper training and the determination to reach the top. Gene was only a light heavyweight when he announced he would some day be heavyweight champion. It was first necessary for him to follow exercises that would build up his weight and also give him greater vitality.

Gene spent five years getting ready for his title bout with Jack Dempsey. I talked with Tunney as he weighed in for the match, and I never found a boxer who was so confident of victory. Gene felt his training program had to end with success, and it did.

Harlow Next Coach, Maryland Insists

HARVARD'S DICK HARLOW—VERY MUCH IN DEMAND

Dick Harlow is going to coach at University of Maryland. You can bet your new Kelly-green fedora on that. It may be next year or it may be in 1941 but the Harvard shell-game wizard is going despite denials by himself and director of athletics Bill Bingham.

GREEN PLAY-CALLING BLAIK'S MAIN WORRY

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 24—Despite the shellacking Harvard took from Penn. Coach Earl Blaik sees no bed of roses for his Dartmouth team when it invades the Stadium Saturday for its annual contest with the Crimson.

Although the fine end play of Bob Krieger, Stub Pearson's improved defensive play at center and the climax running of Bombshell Bill Hutchinson are encouraging, Blaik is frankly worried. It's the signal calling post that is turning his hair gray.

Saturday, against Lafayette, Dartmouth wasted many chances to score, as it did against Navy the week before.

After a march down the field Saturday, Dartmouth was on Lafayette's three-yard line, first down. Hutchinson was sent on a sweep, Hayden was sent off tackle, then Hutch was pushed through the line.

FEW POINTS FOR EFFORTS

On fourth down, Hall, who finally was called upon to hit the line, was unable to make the yardage. Why Hall wasn't called on before fourth down is still puzzling Blaik, for the team had gained 30 yards through the line just before this, with Hall the spearhead.

Dartmouth later advanced 50 yards down the field on running plays, then unaccountably switched to fruitless aerials. Believe it or not, Dartmouth gained 296 yards by rushing and yet was able to score only twice, once on a sensational long distance run and once on an end around.

There was all kinds of the power in the team, it seemed, but that power never was harnessed.

The Green could afford to make mistakes against Lafayette but those same mistakes will be fatal against the Crimson.

MILLER, ORR BEST

Sandy Courter and Norton have been calling the plays for the Green to date. They'll indulge in more mental than physical exercise the rest of this week.

If Dartmouth can lick Harvard on merit, Blaik does not intend to see his chances of victory run down the drain because of illogical play selections.

JACK ORR
May not face Harvard

Capt. Whit Miller and Halfback Jack Orr were excused from the Monday drill. Miller is sporting a discolored eye from the impact of a cleated boot.

Orr came up with a separation of the shoulder, and it is doubtful if he is ready to face Dartmouth. X-ray pictures revealed no broken bones, but the injury will take more than a week to heal, physicians believe.

Harvard can expect to see the best end-around running Saturday since Bud Holland was performing for Cornell.

Krieger, a converted halfback, was immense as he scored against Lafayette. The play had so much deception that even the officials were caught napping. It started and developed exactly like the reverses which were the chief maneuver of the Big Green last fall.

The line is coming along as well as could be expected, and Lou Young, Dan Dacey and John Guenther are forming an outstanding guard trio.

The Associated Press carried the following report from Baltimore this morning:

Dick Harlow will become football coach at University of Maryland "if negotiations now under way are carried to completion, as they probably will be," the Sun said in a story written for this morning's edition.

"When asked about the negotiations with Harlow," the Sun said, "one of the authorities at College Park said, 'Nothing has been closed as yet.'"

"This official also said that he regretted the fact the coaching situation at Maryland had been given such wide publicity because of the embarrassment to those concerned."

Frank Dobson is the present Maryland coach.

Harvard countered with the following denials:

HARLOW—"There is no truth in published reports that I am planning to leave Harvard at the end of this season. I am not negotiating with any other institution and I shall coach at Harvard next year."

BINGHAM—"Mr. Harlow has not resigned as Harvard coach. He assures me he will not. He will be head coach of football next year and his contract does not expire for a number of years."

DENIALS EXPECTED

It is customary to issue denials. They all do it, perhaps to save embarrassment to those concerned. In this case it could be Frank Dobson, who is doing the coaching at Maryland.

Frankie Krieger denied up to the last minute that he was going to the Pirates to succeed Pie Traynor.

Sam Bradson and Branch Rickey are still denying that Joe Medwick is going to the Cubs in exchange for Bill Herman and Augie Galan.

Even the Red Sox denied a few years back that Jimmy Foss was coming here, when everybody in town knew it.

It is the old army game.

Where there is so much smoke, you can bet something is burning, and in this case it seems to be the contract that Harlow has with Harvard.

"His contract extends over a period of years," says Bingham. Harlow, it seems, merely has an option to renew his contract. He is at liberty, one understands, to break it at any time he wants.

Look at it this way. Any man in Harlow's shoes has

LEAHY DRIVES EAGLES

Fearing that his Boston College Eagles might fall victim to over-confidence, Coach Frank Leahy sent his squad through a rugged two-hour Monday practice.

Emphasis was on blocking, passing and pass defense. Today the team was to scrimmage and tomorrow it will be more of the same. Thursday a third scrimmage may be ordered in preparation for the Heights invasion of St. Anselm's on Saturday.

LEAHY SEES FLAWS

Naturally pleased with the work of his men in beating Temple, Leahy said the work of most of his men last Saturday pleased him, but that didn't mean that the team was clicking in perfect style.

"There are many more wrinkles to iron out," said Frank yesterday. "After looking at the results Saturday after three days of scrimmage last week, I'd say that contact work each day won't do this bunch any harm."

After his great performance in the Temple game Lou Kubiak, the hardworking senior left tackle, once again is back in the spotlight. Another performance as good as last week's will relegate his erstwhile superior, Joe Manzo and Steve Levantis, to seats on the bench.

BATTLE FOR JOB

With Manzo expected to be in shape for the coming game with St. Anselm's and Levantis striving to retain his standing of last week, the battle for the first string job will be brisk.

While St. Anselm's won't bring the strength which Temple towed into town last week, the Hawks will give the favored Eagles lots of trouble.

They've been pointing for this one since last year's mud battle which ended 0-0.

Mitey B. U. Back Now Starter

Good work never goes unrewarded at Boston University, and for that reason Jimmy "Gus" Sullivan will start at right halfback against Western Maryland next Friday night at Baltimore.

This mitey 150-pound sophomore who hails from Jamaica Plain and is a product of Boston English jumped from the third backfield to the starting quartet by his performance against Upsala.

Couch Pat Hanley has always thought highly of his tiny sophomore back and has been using him as a "spot player" in the past three games. The Terrier mentor feared that his lack of weight and height would make a starting assignment a bit too tough.

Last Saturday, though, Sullivan played more than half the game and looked better at the finish than he did at the start. He was the best Terrier running back and also caught one of the two touchdowns passes.

So, today the "kid" is a regular and there is probably one person in this town even happier than Gus himself and that's his older brother, Dr. Charley Sullivan.

Charley is the brilliant Dartmouth end of a few years ago who entered Boston University's medical school after being graduated from Dartmouth.

Dr. Sullivan, in order to keep close to the game, has become an official and is rated as one of the best of the younger group in the profession today.

Gus always wanted to follow his brother's footsteps and did well at Boston English as a halfback. He entered Boston University last fall and was so popular that his mates elected him captain. Gus did a good job as a running back all last year. His standout performance was against Boston College when he ran 63 yards for a touchdown, the only score chalked up against the great Panthers last season.

Rhode Island's Super-Kicker, Scorer to Face Huskies

Fans who prefer individual performances on a football field would do well in visiting Kent Field, Brookline, next Saturday afternoon to see Northeastern quell Rhode Island State.

The visitors will bring the leading scorer in the East and probably the best kicker in the country to Brookline in Duke Abruzzi and Warner Keeney.

Abruzzi is the brilliant halfback who has chalked up seven touchdowns in the last two games to take the lead in Eastern scoring.

Oddly enough, Abruzzi did not count one in the first three games but against Brooklyn he chalked up four touchdowns and followed with three more against Mass. State last Saturday.

Warner Keeney is the son of Frank Keeney, head coach. Little Warner, who weighs a mere 270, has few if any equals in the country for punting, place kicking and kickoffs.

The huge junior is rather slow and has to stand back 15 yards when he punts but that makes little difference because he averages over 50 yards from the line of scrimmage and 70-yard boots are not uncommon for him.

As for place kicking, Warner booted one that went 48 yards through the air last Saturday, to beat Mass. State in the closing seconds of play.

MERT HUNT

JOE CONNOLLY

OUCH—Mert Hunt of Lynn grimaces as he turns his head sideways after taking a punch from Joe Connolly of Dorchester in the spirited final of the 126-pound class in the Arena Iramerk show. Connolly won in three rounds.

READY FOR BELL—Joe Connolly relaxes while he listens to Trainer Tom McGrath, before final round of 126's. Good seconding for an amateur is vital for a winner, and Connolly apparently had it.

AL DUTRA

BERNARD HOWARD

WINS AGAIN—Turning in a winning performance in the 135's is Al Dutra of Cambridge as he trades socks with Bernie Howard of Whitinsville at the Arena. Dutra and other winners last night enter Gloves finals.

CONNOLLY TAKES IRAMERK THRILLER

Billy Connolly, smooth boxing Roxbury 160-pounder, earned a decision over Lou Vivolo, Boston, very much the "hard way" in a rip-roaring slugfest in the final elimination of the Irish-American Golden Glove tournament at the Arena before 3000 fans.

Due to an unintentional push, Connolly sent Vivolo through the ropes in the opening round, and the crowd was all for seeing the Roxbury idol go down to defeat.

In the second and third rounds both boys gave flat science to the Indians and went to it to furnish one of the finest battles witnessed at the Arena this season.

Billy came very fast in the waning moments of the third round and landed often enough to earn the decision.

In the lightweight division Al Dutra, Cambridge, scored two neat wins, both times coming from behind when he appeared beaten.

Nat Canata, Providence, was his first victim. Nat opened festivities with a snappy left hook to the jaw that had Dutra in trouble for a while. But Al came back in the second with a furious attack and after dropping the R. L. had three times, Referee Ed Bradley declared Al the winner.

Scoring a knockdown with but 30 seconds remaining in his final bout with Bernard Howard of Whitinsville, Dutra once again pulled what looked like a hopeless decision out of the fire.

The crowd paid a gross of $1830. There were seventeen bouts, with seven ending via the kayo route.

112—Paul Verdickotti, Providence, defeated Joe Morrisette, Fall River (5 rounds).

118—James Bannon, Jamaica Plain, won by default from Ray Pournier, Mass.

126—Joe Connolly, Dorchester, defeated Mert Hunt, Lynn (3 rounds).
135—Al Dutra, Cambridge, defeated Bernard Howard, Whitinsville (3 rounds).
147—John Teziera, Wareham, defeated Frankie Marvella, Roxbury (2 rounds).
160—Billy Connolly, Roxbury, defeated Lou Vivolo, Boston (3 rounds).
Heavyweight—William Dupree, Cambridge, knocked out Albion Tumas, Dorchester (1 round).

Bruins 3d Line Makeup Settled

HERSHEY, Pa., Oct. 24—Weston Adams and Art Ross of the Bruins, at the Hershey rink today, watched the Bruins go through practice. They made up their minds that Sands, Jackson and Pettigrew would play the third line, and agreed to discuss signing with two amateur forwards, Hugh Little and Gordon Bruce.

In the event that Little and Bruce will agree to turn professional they will be optioned to Hershey, along with Hammill, Reardon, MacReavy and Frost.

This will give the Bruins the two lines intact at Hershey which they want as reserves.

The Bruins had two sessions listed today, Ross changing his mind about single sessions when he received word that Eddie Shore's Springfield team had beaten Les Canadiens 3 to 0 in an exhibition.

Bruins play Shore's team in Boston next Monday and Tuesday, Springfield already has three weeks of practice behind it, and Shore himself is supposed to have played in midseason form.

Pond Defends Army Game Tactics

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 24 (AP)—Head Coach Ducky Pond, defending the Elis' tactics in the Army game which the student paper assailed, said today that "it's good strategy any time to safeguard a lead."

The Yale Daily News, undergraduate publication, created an uproar on the campus in its criticism of the eleven's methods of protecting their advantage in the final minutes of last Saturday's battle which Yale won 20 to 15.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 24 (AP)—Sure, admits Ducky Pond, Yale's head football coach, "we fear Michigan," one of the sensations of the West and the Elis' next opponent, "but, only a little bit."

The Yale mentor is quite confident of the ability of his eleven to give the powerful point-a-minute Wolverines a "plenty tough battle" in Ann Arbor come Saturday. Michigan, unbeaten and impressive in triumphs over Michigan State (26-13), Iowa (27-7) and Chicago (85-0), is going to find a surprise.

KRIEGER HEADACHE TO HARVARD COACHES

By DAVE GLUECK

Quakers and Indians have figured importantly in American history, but they've been a much more modern source of concern

Bingham Denies Harlow to Quit

his professional pride. If he didn't, he wouldn't be a success.

Harlow is an acknowledged headliner as a coach. The pro clubs wouldn't have been so eager to grab him if he were not. The pros know their football as people are beginning to realize; judging from the attendances during the past year or two.

Harlow is not enhancing his reputation at Harvard, where the material annually stays away in droves.

And can you blame him if he wanted to cash in on his coaching lore while he can?

One doesn't remain a headliner in the coaching profession forever, for various reasons. And one doesn't get rich at Harvard, not coaching football.

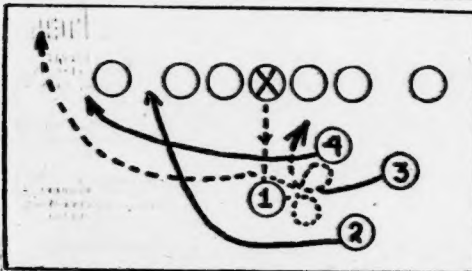

Don't you think Dick Harlow would be happier in his beloved Maryland hills, especially when he had some worth-while material to work with during the fall?

Harlow is idolized around Baltimore. He would be king of all the surveyed there. You couldn't realize it unless you talked to people there.

And a chip like Curly Byrd, Maryland athletic director, wouldn't be quoted as saying Harlow was going there unless he had been given assurance that Dick would move. Byrd has been around too long for that.

On top of it, those close to the situation at the Harvard-Penn game can't recall when Dick showed such a willingness to "take it" sitting down.

GREEN MYSTERY—Puzzling Harvard strategists this week is Bob Krieger of Dartmouth, halfback shifted to end with good results. His end-around work is phenomenal, and there's a chance he might be used as a back again. So how can the Crimson prepare for him?

NEW YORK U. END RUN

Coach Mal Stevens uses this tricky end run from a balanced formation with good effect. The ball comes from center to Back 1, who spins and takes to Back 2. He makes the full spin and then goes ahead as though on a line back, but hands the ball to Back 3, who continues past him with the ball to speed around left end.

(This is the second of a series of plays, as used by famed football coaches, appearing exclusively in the Boston Evening American sports pages.)

to the Harvard coaching staff. Last Saturday Penn upset the Crimson appreciably, incidentally sidelining two of the starting team. Now comes Dartmouth, also unbeaten and underrated, for a crack at its third successive victory over Harvard.

Two years ago Wild Bill Hutchinson, the great Green mudder, splashed and dashed Harvard hopes by scoring four times across a field that backed only a couple of water buffalo to look like a Chinese rice paddy.

Last year Harvard would rather have beaten Dartmouth than Yale. "Gunning for the Green," was everybody's idea, but All-American Bob McLeod took over, and all the Crimson could do was add another rose to Bobby's Bowl hopes.

HUTCHINSON BACK

This year it's Hutchinson's turn again, and loud rumor says he won't be alone. There's another thorn from the Hanover hills in Dick Harlow's side as he makes plans for the Indian war, and his name appropriately is Bob "Blitz" Krieger. Literally translated this means "lightning warrior," which is just how he plans to translate it on Saturday.

Coach Blaik has moved Krieger from the backfield to end, in a double effort to strengthen the wings and spread his running attack. Against Lafayette, the fast 190-pounder picked up enough momentum on an end-around play to carry him across the dear diagonals.

On defense, he was as sure as the side lines, and much rougher. This move may be just a ruse to make the Crimson waste a week in preparation for Krieger at end only to have him turn up in the backfield like a very bad penny.

Harlow has also shuffled his team to find a stronger combination. Mose Hallett has replaced Miller at left tackle on Team A after a quick look at the pictures showed that the big Milwaukeean still lacks experience in meeting mousetraps.

AYRES FIT AGAIN

Burge Ayres, who suffered a Saturday body injury, after he had held up the line from center for three periods, will be set for the Indiana according to the latest reports, and Joe Koufman, outstanding end, also may come along fast enough to make the startling whistle again.

The sophomore replacements will get plenty of scrimmaging this week in a try for a fast tuneup. Dick Phister, who subbed at running guard for little Erny Sargeant, was good enough on defense, but showed that he needs plenty of practice in finding and blocking the enemy secondaries.

Club Peabody is just about on a par with the veteran Lowry at the partner post, and may out him before many more games.

After their Monday rest, the veterans are all ready to start work against Dartmouth plays, which Floyd Stahl, head scout, will put on with the J. Vs. Stahl claims that Dartmouth is almost as good this year as last, and his visits in Hanover seem to have left him full of unpleasant forebodings for the Crimson.

H. C. 3d Stringers Star in Scrimmage

WORCESTER, Oct. 24—Late classes kept many regulars from Monday Holy Cross football practice, but Joe Sheketskis scrimmaged a makeshift varsity against the freshmen, in the first tuneup for Colgate.

A pair of third string backs, Sophomore Tom Sullivan and Gus Gerasimos, provided impressive ball carrying performances.
